Munitions, Ship Lobbyists Concentrate to Defeat Nye Resolution

WASHINGTON — Munitions companies and shipbuilding firms are marshalling their highest-powered lobbyists to defeat the Nye Resolution for an investigation of their contracts and profits. A few weeks ago probably they would have been successful, but in view of recent exposures and the present temper of the Senate, Nye should have adequate support for his resolution.

If so, some startling disclosures are due to be aired. Here are some of them:

1. Sale of American munitions to warring Latin American countries at the very moment Secretary Stimson was entreating those countries to make peace.

2. The attempt of the War Department to kill a resolution requested by Roosevelt which would give him the power to embargo arms shipments to warring countries. Nye plans to show that the War Department actually summoned representatives of munitions companies and instructed them to lobby on Capitol Hill in order to kill the President's resolution.

3. The fact that Senate Naval Affairs sub-committee has never concluded its investigation of the lobbying activities of the big ship-building companies to defeat the Geneva Naval Conference.

4. The fact that the naval officer named as party to the attempt to defeat that conference, Admiral Joseph M. Reeves, now has been appointed commander of the United States Fleet. Ex-Secretary of the Navy Adams, commenting on Reeves' later lobbying regarding a Pacific dirigible mooring mast, said it "reflected no credit on this Department."

5. The peculiar manner in which the ship-building companies submitted bids for the Roosevelt naval program.

The Last Luncheon

The day before William P. MacCracken was ordered arrested by the Senate, in the air mail scandals, he was given a luncheon at the Carlton Hotel. The guests were all Republicans, most of them colleagues of MacCracken in the Coolidge and Hoover Little Cabinets, where he served as Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Aviation.

The party, although convivial, had all the earmarks of a farewell feed for a departing colleague.

Huey Long may be no Dempsey with his fists, but in the columns of his organ, The American Progress, he swings a wicked punch.

In the current issue, the Kingfish takes on Mayor Walmsley of New Orleans—until recently his political ally—now his bitter foe. Although Huey was alleged to have avoided Walmsley when he came to Washington the other day, he certainly pulls no punches in his paper. After a general vitriolic castigation, Huey concludes by pulling a "scandal" on his opponent.

This is nothing less than a veiled accusation that Walmsley once sat at the same dinner table with a negro. According to The American Progress, Walmsley came to the Capital some four years ago and attended a social affair where also was present Representative Oscar DePriest, Illinois Republican and the only Negro in Congress.

The two men, Huey charges with considerable indignation, not only sat opposite one another, but actually engaged in friendly conversation.

Spanking

A vigorous parliamentary spanking was the motive of House leaders in placing the history-making Stock Exchange control bill in the hands of the Interstate Commerce Committee.

NEW YORK, Feb. 15.—Vigorous denial of Postmaster General Farley's charges of conspiracy and collusion in connection with air mail contracts obtained during his tenure of office was entered today by Walter S. Brown, postmaster general in the Hoover administration

"Everything I did and everything done by anyone under me in connection with those contracts," he said, "was entirely legal and proper."

Brown's new denial of the charges was prompted by the letter sent by Farley to Senator Black of Alabama setting forth the circumstances which prompted him to caucel all private air mail contracts and hand the task of flying the mails to the United States army.

CHARGED AS AIDE

Farley's letter charged that Brown, while postmaster general, had illegally assisted the large air line corporations to divide the contracts among themselves virtually without competitive bidding.

"I am the only person in the world who knows the story of the air mail contracts," said Brown, "and I propose to tell it.

"I have been trying to tell it for weeks but they (the Senate committee) haven't given me a chance."

Asked about the meetings referred to in Farley's letter, Brown said, "I know all about every meeting ever held in my office."

"I know the meetings Farley is making reference to. They were held for proper legal purposes—and they were not connected with the air mail contracts."

HOUSE VOTES SCHOOL BILL

Senate Must Concur to Give State Aid Schools Much-Needed Money.

COLUMBUS, Feb. 15.—Ohio's state aid schools will have at their disposal $5,000,000 to meet obligations for 1933 and until July 1, 1934, if the Senate concurs, as was anticipated today, in House amendments to the Gunsett school appropriations bill.

Ending a long session of debate, the House finally passed the amended Gunsett bill by a vote of 82 to 15, after striking out a $2,000,000 item for aid to parochial elementary schools.

As received from the Senate, the schools bill would have appropriated $6,500,000 for state aid schools expenses for 1933 and all of 1934, but the House whittled the sum down to $5,000,000 and omitted an appropriation for the last half of this year.

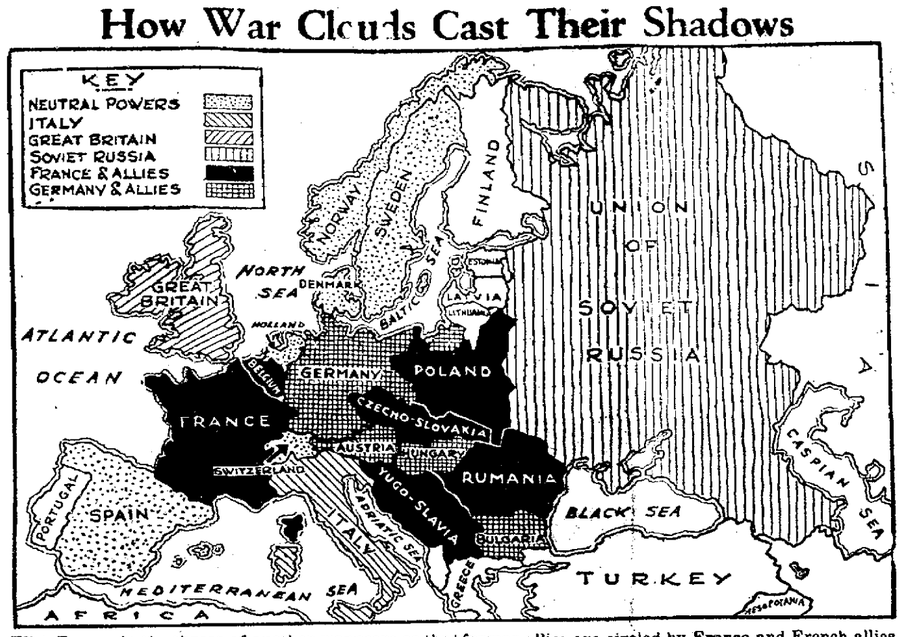
Because the money appropriated is not now in the state treasury, to make it available to distressed schools at once, the House must concur in the Lloyd Senate bill which would permit school districts to borrow against anticipated receipts from liquor taxes and profits.

Elimination of the controversial parochial schools appropriation from the bill, which resulted in the House defeating the entire measure when it first came up for passage last week, resulted from a strategic move by Rep. R. A. Pollock (R) Stark, leader of the bloc opposed to the state granting financial assistance to parochial schools.

Pollock dragged out rule 88 of the House code which permits a separate vote to be taken on each item included in an appropriations bill. Veteran legislators said the particular rule had not been invoked before in the House since 1896.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Sweeney, of Orange, N. J., are here for a few days visit with Mrs. Sweeney's sister, Mrs. William L. Mack, S. Washington-st.

How War Clouds Cast Their Shadows



With Europe in the throes of another war scare as the result of the trouble in Austria, this map shows how the continent lines up in the new "balance of power" between armed nations. Note how Germany and her former allies are circled by France and French allies, except in the south, where Italy remains the unknown factor. Great Britain and Soviet Russia, too, maintain "watching briefs" as tension increases.

Troops Menace Austria Border

(By International News Service)

Austria's neighbors were moving troops toward her borders and important diplomatic moves were in progress today as civil war continued in the republic. Reports from European capitals follow:

PRAGUE— Czecho-Slovakia answered Italian troop concentrations on Austria's southern frontier by reinforcing Czecho-Slovakian patrols on the northern Austrian border.

PARIS—Formation of an international army to guarantee Austrian independence will be discussed by British, French and Czecho- Slovakian representatives tomorrow and Premier Doumergue warned the country to be prepared against "surprises."

ACTION QUESTIONED

LONDON-Germany and Italy inquired as to Great Britain's precise intentions if Austria's sovereignty were violated by a foreign power but are believed to have received a non-committal reply.

VIENNA—Government forces and Socialists battled in the suburbs of the capital and elsewhere throughout the country as the Civil war continued into the third day but the government apparently has the upper hand.

The appeal of Chancellor Dollfuss to the Socialists, who have fought the government through three bitter days that took toll of thousands of lives, to surrender was virtually ignored.

So far as could be learned, not a single man of the Socialist forces laid down his arms. A few women and children, weary of the fighting, brought arms and ammunition to police stations and turned them in.

The men solidly indicated a stubborn disposition to fight it out to the bitter end, even though it became increasingly evident the odds were overwhelmingly against them.

$10,000 ASKED IN DAMAGE SUIT

Joseph Schleich Sued By Fred Wing As Result of Injuries; Both of Williamsport.

Joseph Schleich , Williamsport, had been named defendant in a damage suit for $10,000, Thursday, by Fred Wing, also of Williamsport.

Schleich's attorney is Tom A. Renick while William Radcliff and Adkins and Adkins are Wing's lawyers.

The damages are sought by Wing for injuries he alleges he suffered when Schleich's car struck a truck on which he was riding. The defendant is charged with negligence.

SOLDIER VS. SOCIALIST

VIENNA, Feb. 15.—"An eye for an eye . . .:" and one government soldier for every Socialist.

Thoroughly characteristic of their stubborn determination to fight their battle to the death, and of their hatred for the Dollfuss government, Socialists announced today they would shoot to death one army soldier for every Socialist executed after convictions by a court martial.

The Socialists said they had captured 20 soldiers, and promised one of these would die for every Socialist sent to the gallows.

Two Socialists were hanged yesterday after being court martialed.

MRS. PARKER FINED $10 FOR PROFANITY

Mrs. Elizabeth Parker, Fairview-ave, was fined $10 and costs by Mayor W. B. Cady, Thursday, for disorderly conduct by use of profanity on E. Mill-st.

She was committed to the county jail until fine and costs are paid.

The warrant for her arrest was sworn by Alonzo Boltenhouse and the arrest was made by Officer William McCrady.

POLICE PROBE SMITH ACTION

Many Cities Learning Man Arrested Here Worked 'Drill' Racket.

Police of nearly every city in southern Ohio have been busy during the past week tracing electric drills which were stolen allegedly by Ed. Smith, of . Cincinnati, arrested here.

Smith, taken to Hillsboro, confessed theft of a number of drills in a 'racket' though he borrowed but never returned the tools, many of which were valuable.

He was placed in custody of Georgetown, Brown-co, police, and then was turned over to Athens. Smith, Wednesday, accompanied officers of Athens and Nelsonville to Washington C. H. to try to recover two drills which he had stolen and sold in that city.

Police claim he has confessed theft of 300 electric drills ranging in value from $40 to $150 from garages and machine shops. He did not steal any here but had sold two at local garages. He sold them at prices far below their original value.

Chillicothe is also investigating his reported activities in that city and so are Portsmouth and Pomeroy.

Man's Cruelty Toward Son, 3 Told In Court

Mother Tells of Violence As Man, 31, Is On Trial For His Life.

DENVER, Feb. 15.—The bitterness of years of pent-up hatred broke out in the trial at Littleton, Colo., today of Donald K. Smith, 31, for the killing of his three-year-old son, Donald Jr. Smith and his wife hurled charges of unbelievably cruel tortures as she told her version of events leading up to the child's death.

Smith, on trial for his life, is charged with killing the child in a fit of rage because the youngster could not distinguish between the words "breakfast" and "supper."

Mrs. Mabel Smith, the child's mother and the wife of the defendant, described inhuman tortures which she declared her husband habitually practiced on "Donnie."

Mrs. Smith said he slapped the child with a flyswatter, stuck him with a hatpin, forced him to eat soap, pricked him with a two-tined meat fork and pinched him with pliers. On the day before the child's death, she testified, her husband beat him with the buckle end of a belt until his head and back were a mass of bruises.

STATES EXTEND TAG DEADLINES

Sheriff Charles Radcliff has been instructed by motor vehicles department officials that license plate deadlines have been extend in Texas to April and in Kentucky to March 1. Persons driving cars of these states with 1933 tags prior to these dates are not violating the law.

West Virginia has changed its tag plan from January 1 to July 1. licenses are to be paid each six months.

ASHVILLE ACTS ON BOND SALE

Village Approves Contract of Government For New Waterworks.

SITES ARE CONSIDERED

Test Well To Be Sunk As Council Takes Action.

Ashville council, Wednesday evening, under suspension of rules passed a resoultion accepting the federal bond contract on the waterworks project as presented by the government.

The contract is considered a liberal one by the engineers, council, and solicitor, and is much better than was expected.

The sewer bond contract has not yet been received but is expected shortly.

Council by ordinance appropriated $495 and authorized the trustees of the Board of Public Affairs to proceed at the earliest time to put down a 10-inch well in the southwest corner of Miller park as a test-well for the project. It is thought the well will have to be sunk to a depth of 90 or 95 feet. Contracts for this initial step will be ready soon.

Solicitor Emmitt John Crist was authorized by council to collect the necessary data and present it to Squire, Saunders and Dempsey, bond salesmen of Cleveland, for their examination and approval. If these pass muster they will be forwarded to Washington for final action.

The trustees of the Board of Public Affairs have three possible sites for 100.000 gallon elevated storage tank under observation. All are on the west side of the village.

The session lasted three and one-half hours and was attended by Engineer Niple, Solicitor Crist, the three trustees, of the Public Affairs board, G. C. Cline, O. W. Wills, and Taylor Britlinger, Mayor E. E. Fraunfelter, and the six councilmen.

WHITE ANNOUNCES FOR SECOND TERM

County Autitor Puts His Petition In Circluation For Nomination.

Clifford M. White, 403 S. Court-st, announced Thursday that he is a candidate for his second term as county auditor. He obtained his petition from Harry E. Weill, clerk of the board of elections, Wednesday afternoon, and placed it in circulation, Thursday.

Mr. White is in the final year of his four year term.

A World War vetertan and a Democrat, Mr. White received a large vote when he ran four years ago defeating a number of good Pickaway-co men for the Democratic nomination.

He succeeded Bryce Briggs as auditor.

The Pickaway-twp Community day was being held today. A splendid program has been arranged this evening.

4 Appointed In Business Census

Miss Pickens, Mrs. Kirkpatrick, Mr. Imler, Mr. Wilson Named For Jobs.

Clark Doughty, of the census bureau of the department of commerce, announced Thursday that he had appointed Miss Mary Pickens, Harry L. Imler, Amos Wilson, and Mrs. Fannie Kirkpatrick, all of this city, to conduct a business census of Circleville and Pickaway-co.

All began their work Thursday morning.

Miss Pickens will work west of the Scioto river, Imler east of Main-st in Circleville, and Mrs. Kirkpatrick, north of Main-st in this city.

CWA TO RAZE 2 BUILDINGS

Hays Receives Word From Washington; No Other Details Related.

A Huse Hays, postmaster, received a telegram from Washington D. C. Thursday, informing him that the Hotel Boggs and the Hohen - Schleyer property, S. Court-st, will be razed under the Civil Works administration.

No other details concerning the removal of the two buildings was included in the wire.

A petition has been forwarded through Mr. Hays asking that the work be done before warm weather arrives.

Land on which the two buildings stand is now owned by the government being purchased from Paul Hohen-Schleyer for a post office site. Money has been allocated for the building but no contracts have yet been let for its construction.

HOSLER FUNERAL FRIDAY AT 3:30

Funeral services will be held Friday at 3:30 p. m. at the Mader & Ebert mortuary, W. Main-st, for Samuel E. Hosler, who died Wednesday noon at his home on N. Court-st. Rev. Herman A. Sayre will officiate with interment in Forest cemetery.

Mr. Hosler is survived by his widow, Mrs. Addie Fissell Hosler; a son; Pressley R., and two sisters.

Pall bearers will include Ralph Metzger of Kingston, Meeker Metzger of Dayton, John Fissell, of Indianapolis, Ellston Fissell of Dayton, Charles Hosler and Elijah Martin of Columbus.

The body is at the Mader & Ebert mortuary where friends may call.

Miss Ruth Beckwith, former resident here, is still serious in Grant hospital, Columbus, but her condition today was reported slightly improved. Miss Beckwith's brother, Barrett Beckwith, of Syracuse, N. Y., arrived in Columbus, Wednesday.

SENATE OKEHS BILL

North end Sewer, Smith Ditch Are Delayed

Although Ohio Civil Works officials have not yet approved the north end sewer and the Smith ditch, two projects expected to put many to work, they have okehed four projects, two in Circleville, one in Atlanta, and one in New Holland.

The projects are:

1. Reflooring auditorium, painting walls and woodwork in auditorium, repairing, plastering, painting walls in halls, and ante-room of the Memorial Hall, also refinishing and painting floor after it has been laid in auditorium, $2,561 of which is appropriated by CWA and from local appropriation, also from local contributions, 1,200 hours of employment.

2. Cleaning and landscaping grounds of the old Highland cemetery, here, $717, of which appropriated by CWA and local appropriation, 240 hours of employment.

3. Improving channel and draining the village, Scioto and Perry-twp, $240, $700 from CWA, 540 hours of employment.

4. Leveling and beautifying school grounds in New Holland, $520, 10 workers and 208 hours employment.

DEPEND ON WEATHER

Pickaway-co CWA office has received instructions from Columbus office to begin work on the projects as soon as weather permits. A telegram from Ralph E. O. Braught, state relief commissioner, received at 6:20 p. m. Wednesday ordered work on all projects that have been started to be completed. The U. S. Senate Wednesday afternoon, approved the $9,500,000 appropriation for continuance of CWA and relief.

The Pickaway-twp road project has been completed and the Walnut creek project has been nearly finished.

SCOUT TO ASSIST

Boy Scouts of Circleville, Ashville, and Williamsport have been called in to assist in CWA work.

They will begin Monday to cover Pickaway-co visiting every home to learn if any families have surplus clothing, furniture or anything that will help many needy families in the county.

The scouts will be on the job four days calling on residents then will be assisted by CWA trucks in collecting the donations.

Donations will be distributed the same as food and other supplies, making deliveries in each township to destitute families.

COLUMBUS, Feb. 15.—Eighty-seven NRA highway projects employing 3,458 men were under construction throughout Ohio during January, Highway Director O. W. Merrell reported to Governor George White today.

Workers, both skilled and unskilled, were paid a total of $123,920.12, with a small portion of the money used for team hire and equipment rentals, the report showed.

An average of about 20,000 men also worked on CWA highway projects which are under the supervision of the state highway department.

HOPPLE WRITES GOV. WHITE HIS STATEMENT "MISQUOTED"

Utilities Commissioner Says Controversy Through Press Below Dignity of Himself Personally and Officially; White Studies Action.

COLUMBUS, Feb. 15. What action, if any, will be taken in the case of E. J. Hopple, chairman of the Ohio public utilities commission, whose official "head" has been demanded in a hue and cry raised against certain remarks attributed to him in a recent speech at Cleveland, was expected to be decided today by Governor George White.

In a lengthy explanation letter, written at the request of the governor in answer to allegations contained in a resolution adopted by the Akron city council and demanding removal of the commission chairman, Hopple staunchly denied that he had ever stated he would "defend the utility against public hysteria."

"I can state frankly and honestly," Hopple wrote Governor White, "that I have no prejudices which would prevent me from fairly and impartially considering and deciding any question that may come before me. This statement is completely supported by the record of my three years service on the commission."

Many Cities Learning Man Arrested Here Worked 'Drill' Racket.

Police of nearly every city in southern Ohio have been busy during the past week tracing electric drills which were stolen allegedly by Ed. Smith, of Cincinnati, arrested here.

Smith, taken to Hillsboro, confessed theft of a number of drills in a 'racket' though he borrowed but never returned the tools, many of which were valuable.

He was placed in custody of Georgetown, Brown-co, police, and then was turned over to Athens. Smith, Wednesday, accompanied officers of Athens and Nelsonville to Washington C. H. to try to recover two drills which he had stolen and sold in that city.

Police claim he has confessed theft of 300 electric drills ranging in value from $40 to $150 from garages and machine shops. He did not steal any here but had sold two at local garages. He sold them at prices far below their original value.

Chillicothe is also investigating his reported activities in that city and so are Portsmouth and Pomeroy.

Man's Cruelty Toward Son, 3 Told In Court

Mother Tells of Violence As Man, 31, Is On Trial For His Life.

DENVER, Feb. 15.—The bitterness of years of pent-up hatred broke out in the trial at Littleton, Colo., today of Donald K. Smith, 31, for the killing of his three-year-old son, Donald Jr. Smith and his wife hurled charges of unbelievably cruel tortures as she told her version of events leading up to the child's death.

Smith, on trial for his life, is charged with killing the child in a fit of rage because the youngster could not distinguish between the words "breakfast" and "supper."

Mrs. Mabel Smith, the child's mother and the wife of the defendant, described inhuman tortures which she declared her husband habitually practiced on "Donnie."

Mrs. Smith said he slapped the child with a flyswatter, stuck him with a hatpin, forced him to eat soap, pricked him with a two-tined meat fork and pinched him with pliers. On the day before the child's death, she testified, her husband beat him with the buckle end of a belt until his head and back were a mass of bruises.

STATES EXTEND TAG DEADLINES

Sheriff Charles Radcliff has been instructed by motor vehicles department officials that license plate deadlines have been extend in Texas to April and in Kentucky to March 1. Persons driving cars of these states with 1933 tags prior to these dates are not violating the law.

West Virginia has changed its tag plan from January 1 to July 1. licenses are to be paid each six months.

ASHVILLE ACTS ON BOND SALE

Village Approves Contract of Government For New Waterworks.

SITES ARE CONSIDERED

Test Well To Be Sunk As Council Takes Action.

Ashville council, Wednesday evening, under suspension of rules passed a resoultion accepting the federal bond contract on the waterworks project as presented by the government.

The contract is considered a liberal one by the engineers, council, and solicitor, and is much better than was expected.

The sewer bond contract has not yet been received but is expected shortly.

Council by ordinance appropriated $495 and authorized the trustees of the Board of Public Affairs to proceed at the earliest time to put down a 10-inch well in the southwest corner of Miller park as a test-well for the project. It is thought the well will have to be sunk to a depth of 90 or 95 feet. Contracts for this initial step will be ready soon.

Solicitor Emmitt Jones Crist was authorized by council to collect the necessary data and present it to Squire, Saunders and Dempsey, bond salesmen of Cleveland, for their examination and approval. If these pass muster they will be forwarded to Washington for final action.

The trustees of the Board of Public Affairs have three possible sites for 100,000 gallon elevated storage tank under observation. All are on the west side of the village.

The session lasted three and one-half hours and was attended by Engineer Niple, Solicitor Crist, the three trustees, of the Public Affairs board, G. C. Cline, O. W. Wills, and Taylor Britlinger, Mayor E. E. Fraunfelter, and the six councilmen.

WHITE ANNOUNCES FOR SECOND TERM

County Autitor Puts His Petition In Circluation For Nomination.

Clifford M. White, 403 S. Court-st, announced Thursday that he is a candidate for his second term as county auditor. He obtained his petition from Harry E. Weill, clerk of the board of elections, Wednesday afternoon, and placed it in circulation, Thursday.

Mr. White is in the final year of his four year term.

A World War vetertan and a Democrat, Mr. White received a large vote when he ran four years ago defeating a number of good Pickaway-co men for the Democratic nomination.

He succeeded Bryce Briggs as auditor.

The Pickaway-twp Community day was being held today. A splendid program has been arranged this evening.

4 Appointed In Business Census

Miss Pickens, Mrs. Kirkpatrick, Mr. Imler, Mr. Wilson Named For Jobs.

Clark Doughty, of the census bureau of the department of commerce, announced Thursday that he had appointed Miss Mary Pickens, Harry L. Imler, Amos Wilson, and Mrs. Fannie Kirkpatrick, all of this city, to conduct a business census of Circleville and Pickaway-co.

All began their work Thursday morning.

Miss Pickens will work west of the Scioto river, Imler east of the river, Wilson south of Main-st in Circleville, and Mrs. Kirkpatrick, north of Main-st in this city.

CWA TO RAZE 2 BUILDINGS

Hays Receives Word From Washington; No Other Details Related.

A Huse Hays, postmaster, received a telegram from Washington D. C. Thursday, informing him that the Hotel Boggs and the Hohen - Schleyer property, S. Court-st, will be razed under the Civil Works administration.

No other details concerning the removal of the two buildings was included in the wire.

A petition has been forwarded through Mr. Hays asking that the work be done before warm weather arrives.

Land on which the two buildings stand is now owned by the government being purchased from Paul Hohen-Schleyer for a post office site. Money has been allocated for the building but no contracts have yet been let for its construction.

HOSLER FUNERAL FRIDAY AT 3:30

Funeral services will be held Friday at 3:30 p. m. at the Mader & Ebert mortuary, W. Main-st, for Samuel E. Hosler, who died Wednesday noon at his home on N. Court-st. Rev. Herman A. Sayre will officiate with interment in Forest cemetery.

Mr. Hosler is survived by his widow, Mrs. Addie Fissell Hosler; a son; Pressley R., and two sisters.

Pall bearers will include Ralph Metzger of Kingston, Meeker Metzger of Dayton, John Fissell, of Indianapolis, Ellston Fissell of Dayton, Charles Hosler and Elijah Martin of Columbus.

The body is at the Mader & Ebert mortuary where friends may call.

Miss Ruth Beckwith, former resident here, is still serious in Grant hospital, Columbus, but her condition today was reported slightly improved. Miss Beckwith's brother, Barrett Beckwith, of Syracuse, N. Y., arrived in Columbus, Wednesday.

HOPPLE WRITES GOV. WHITE HIS STATEMENT "MISQUOTED"

Utilities Commissioner Says Controversy Through Press Below Dignity of Himself Personally and Officially; White Studies Action.

COLUMBUS, Feb. 15.— What action, if any, will be taken in the case of E. J. Hopple, chairman of the Ohio public utilities commission, whose official "head" has been demanded in a hue and cry raised against certain remarks attributed to him in a recent speech at Cleveland, was expected to be decided today by Governor George White.

In a lengthy explanation letter, written at the request of the governor in answer to allegations contained in a resolution adopted by the Akron city council and demanding removal of the commission chairman, Hopple staunchly denied that he had ever stated he would "defend the utility against public hysteria."

"I can state frankly and honestly," Hopple wrote Governor Write, "that I have no prejudices which would prevent me from fairly and impartially considering and deciding any question that may come before me. This statement is completely supported by the record of my three year's service on the commission."

DISSENTED ONCE

Hopple said that during his

SENATE OKEHS BILL

North end Sewer, Smith Ditch Are Delayed

Although Ohio Civil Works officials have not yet approved the north end sewer and the Smith ditch, two projects expected to put many to work, they have signed four projects, two in Circleville, one in Atlanta, and one in New Holland.

The projects are:

1. Reflooring auditorium, painting walls and woodwork in auditorium, repairing, plastering and painting walls in halls, relic room and ante-room of the Memorial Hall, also refinishing and painting floor after it has been laid in the auditorium, $2.561 of which $1,700 is appropriated by CWA and $786 from local appropriation, also $74 from local contributions, 14 workers and 2,334 hours of employment;

2. Cleaning and landscaping the grounds of the old High-st cemetery, here, $717, of which $620 is appropriated by CWA and $97 local appropriation, 10 workers and 1,200 hours of employment;

3. Improving county ditch 34, draining the village of Atlanta, Perry-twp, $240, five workers and 540 hours of employment;

4. Leveling and beautifying the school grounds in New Holland, $520, 10 workers and 952 hours of employment.

DEPEND ON WEATHER

Pickaway-co CWA office has received instructions from the Columbus office to begin work on the projects as soon as weather permits. A telegram from Major E. O. Braught, state relief commissioner, received at 6:30 p. m. Wednesday ordered work on all projects that have been started to be completed. The U. S. Senate, Wednesday afternoon, approved the $9,500,000 appropriation for continuance of CWA and relief.

The Pickaway-twp road job has been completed and the Harsus creek project has been nearly finished.

SCOUT TO ASSIST

Boy Scouts of Circleville, Ashville, and Williamsport have been called in to assist in CWA work.

They will begin Monday to cover Pickaway-co visiting every home to learn if any families have surplus clothing, furniture or anything that will help many needy families in the county.

The scouts will be on the job four days calling on residents then will be assisted by CWA trucks in collecting the donations.

Donations will be distributed the same as food and other supplies, making deliveries in each township to destitute families.

COLUMBUS, Feb. 15.—Eighty-seven NRA highway projects employing 3,458 men were under construction throughout Ohio during January, Highway Director O. W. Merrell reported to Governor George White today.

Workers, both skilled and unskilled, were paid a total of $123,920.12, with a small portion of the money used for team hire and equipment rentals, the report showed.

An average of about 20,000 men also worked on CWA highway projects which are under the supervision of the state highway department.

MR. BOWMAN NOW IN MISSISSIPPI

COLUMBUS, Feb. 15.— Search for Neal Bowman, notorious southern Ohio desperado who escaped from the Lima State hospital for the criminal insane last Christmas day, was extended to the state of Mississippi today following the recovery there of an automobile which he was believed to have been using.

The occupants of the car were sighted near Corinth, Miss., according to reports, and one of the men was said to resemble the hunted insane fugitive.

About This And That

BY THE SECOND GUESSER

THE question predominant in Pickaway-co basketball circles is "Can anyone defeat the Ashville teams?"

The boys have gone through their regular schedule undefeated. With the exception of two games, at Scioto-twp and at Saltcreek-twp, the Harrison-twp boys have not been pressed. They defeated the Commercial Pointers by a seven point edge and Saltcreek by five counters. They were also forced by Jackson for three periods but Nelson Walters, one of Jackson's two stars, went out of the game on personals in the fourth period and the Ashvillers proceeded to score more points in that session than in the other three * * *

Coach Al Kauber has one of the smoothest teams in the county in a long while. We are not going to compare the Ashville team-play with the excellent passing attack exhibited by the departed New Holland varsity a year ago. There is no way to compare the 1933 New Holland team and the 1934 Ashville team, although the 1933 Ashvillers did defeat the New Holland quintet in the district tournament. Kauber's team was not near so strong last year as it is this season * * *

The "discovery" of Jim Scoles, center, made the Ashville five. On the bench last year and expected to be there again this season with big Ottis Ford back in the lineup Scoles got his break when Ford moved to Ironton. The new center, who has been the power-house of the Ashville offense, and defense, too, has outscored opposing centers more than 10 to one during the season * * *

Kauber's other starters include Wink Wellington, a fine floor man; Young, a sophomore forward and a real scoring threat; Dick Morrison, veteran guard, and Steinbrook, who moved to Ashville from Greenfield last summer. Wean, Baker and several others provide the shock troops * * *

Ashville should go through its first assignment with Pickaway-twp, but will meet stiffer opposition from the New Holland team in the second round, the west-county team drawing a bye through the first set of games * * *

The Ashville girls have lost one contest this year, that to Scioto-twp at Commercial Point with Lila Hiles, star center and captain, on the sidelines. The Scioto girls had previously lost at Ashville * *

* * *

Mrs. Morrison, Ashville coach, again has a strong team built around Hiles, Pauline Roese, Edwina Schlegel, the last of several sisters who have helped make Ashville girls' teams strong in recent years. These girls comprise the team's offensive with C. Roese and Wagner the stalwarts on the defense. The Wagner girl performed at Jackson until this year, and she has proved a bulwark on defense* * *

WITHOUT A DOUBT THE ASHVILLE TEAMS ARE THE ONES TO BEAT. WHO WILL DEFEAT THEM IF THEY CAN BE DEFEATED?

Prices for Ohio land turned upward in the second six months of 1933. From a survey by H. R. Moore of the department of rural economics at the Ohio State university, it was learned that the average price an acre in voluntary sales was $51.14 in the first six months of the year, and $55 an acre in the second six months.

NEW ERA OF TRANSPORTATION

The high-speed, lightweight, stream-lined duralumin Union Pacific passenger train which was dedicated Monday in Chicago by W. A. Harriman, chairman of the road's board of directors, in the yards of the Pullman Car & Manufacturing Corporation, its builders. The $200,000 three-car train, designed to sweep the rails at 110 miles an hour, is the answer to the challenge of the airplane. A new era in travel is envisioned by rail men.

SALTCREEK-TWP SCHOOL NOTES

Friday, Feb. 9, Ashville visited S. H. S. for the last game of the season. The boys' game was very well played, with Saltcreek in the lead up to the half of the last quarter. At the end of the third quarter Saltcreek was five points ahead. The final score was 31-28 in favor of Ashville. This was our only defeat this year. The girls' score was Ashville 20; Saltcreek 13.

There were 360 spectators present. We are looking forward to the tournament. Saltcreek will play her first game with Darby, Saturday, Feb. 17, at two o'clock.

The following pupils of the third and fourth grades have 100 per cent attendance for the school year: Geneva Stump, Bernice Jones, Mary Tatman, and Virginia Tatman.

Those receiving 100 in arithmetic for the honor roll the past two weeks are (fourth grade), James Reichelderfer, Esther Steakman, John Spencer, Evelyn Strawser, and Martha Parker.

Third grade, Billy Minshall, Carl Imler, Jennie Anderson, Mary Alice Prince, Billy Rihl, Norma Jean Herron, and Jean Spencer.

The fifth grade spelling honor roll scholars are as follows: Mildred Shupe, Esther Waliser, Dorothy Poling, Francis Fraunfelter, Eugene Crawford, Betty Herron and Grace McNeal.

Sixth grade, Ruth Mary Crawford, Charlotta Schaal, Russell Paxton, Jane Dawson, Mary Jane Paxton, Grace Seymour, Pauline Lutz, and Vernice Gilpen.

A St. Valentine's program was given Wednesday afternoon, Feb. 14, by the first four grades:

Song, "America;" Reading, St. Valentine, John Spencer; Play, Valentine Tarts, 1st and 2nd grades; Recitation, Billy Rihl; Song, 1st and 2nd grades; Drill, George Washington, 1st and 2nd; Recitation, Jean Spencer; Song, Billy Rihl; Recitation, Billy Bowser; Drill, Young Soldiers, 1st and 2nd; Recitation, Robert Poling; Drill, Our School House Flag; Recitation, Evelyn Strawser; Song, "Little Women," 1st and 2nd grades; Recitation, Elden Drum; Drill, George Washington's Birthday; Recitation, George Kerns; Play, Friendly Valentines, 3rd and 4th; Recitation, Russell Lutz; Reading, Boyhood of Lincoln, Betty Hutchison; Drill, George Washington.

Girl Scout News

The Logan Elm Girl scout troop No. 1 met at the Pickaway-twp school Tuesday afternoon under the leadership of Miss Kathleen Dilsaver.

During the patrol corners the girls worked on their first and second class work. Some passed their tests. Plans were discussed for a hike in the near future in order that some of the girls might pass their fire and cooking tests.

The meeting closed with the radio handshake and taps.

Process Beef in Prison

CANNON CITY, Colo.— Two canning factories at the Colorado State penitentiary here, idle for the past several years, will be utilized in the canning of beef for the state's unemployed. Dr. John R. Mohler, chief of the federal bureau of animal husbandry approved the plan to process beef in the prison plants, according to Dr. B. F. Davis, secretary of the Colorado Stockgrowers and Feeders' association.

Auto repairs must be cheaper now. You seldom see a $10 bill that some mechanic has used as a towel.

DARBY SCHOOL NEWS

The girls lost their basketball game with the Monroe girls last Friday evening, the score being 11 to 8. They will not be eligible to participate in the tournament because they failed to win enough of their games. The boys' score was 34 to 13 in Darby's favor. These were the last games of the season.

The boys will play Saltcreek in the tournament next Saturday afternoon. We hope to have a good following to cheer the boys on. If they are to win they will need to have plenty of backing from the sidelines in addition to excellent mental and physical condition.

March 2 is the date set for the games with the D. H. S. Alumni teams. This should prove to be a good drawing card because the Alumni always prove to be rather stiff competition. The admission to the games will be 15c and 10c.

The Seniors have ordered their invitations of the Crescent Co. an Iowa firm.

The Juniors are working on a plan to raise money for the Junior-Senior banquet. A part of the plan will probably be a class play to be given in the near future.

Do not forget the P. T. A. meeting scheduled for Wednesday, Feb. 21. The committee is preparing a good program for the occasion. All are invited to attend.

The total enrollment of the schools now is 287, of which number 83 are in the high school.

NEW RAIL RATES

The lowest passenger rates in the history of the railroad, inaugurated on February 1, and a million dollar program of improvements, including air-conditioning, new equipment, etc., are expected to bring a steady increase in passenger business of the Norfolk and Western Railway. Officials of the railroad expressed this opinion today in a statement on the N. & W.'s aggressive campaign to regain lost passenger traffic.

"On February 1," the statement said, "the Norfolk and Western Railway reduced coach passenger fares to two cents per mile, or approximately 44 per cent from the base rate—the lowest rates in the history of the railroad. The fares in Pullman cars were reduced to three cents a mile and the surcharge was eliminated. The new tariffs are good on all trains over the entire system."

Are YOUR CHILDREN to be members of a LOST GENERATION?

IN AMERICA, for the past four years, we have had an economic upheaval which has disorganized the whole fabric of our daily lives. We have all had a hard time of it. And it is the children who have suffered most!

We have managed to keep food in their mouths, and a roof over their heads. We have contrived to teach them their three R's. But in all the less tangible things of life . . . . the things that build for character and future happiness . . . the children have not had an even break.

Are they to go through life with only half of their natures developed . . . without knowledge or appreciation of music, of books, of plays and pictures . . . just because they had the bad luck to be young during a period of hard times? Is theirs to be a Lost Generation?

Your children deserve their chance. If they have any music in them, they ought to have music lessons, to go to concerts and recitals. If they can draw, for model, or paint, they should have some special instruction. If they love books they ought to have good books to read, and if they love the theater, they ought to the taken to see the best plays.

These are things that make all the difference in the world when a child's character is in the making. Without them life is robbed not only of present interest, but of the capacity to live fully and enjoyably in after years.

In the past 4 years many parents have not been able to give their children these advantages. Others have refrained from doing so because of a natural anxiety about the future.

But now there is every indication that the cause for that anxiety have largely ceased to exist. A great many signs point to that economic upturn for which we have all been looking so long and eagerly.

The Motion Picture Industry is working to full capacity for the first time in 3 years, with 25 percent more pictures in preparation than in 1932.

Automobile production during August showed a gain of 150 percent over August 1932.

Factory workers in the United States were in August receiving 40 million dollars a week more in their pay envelopes than in March.

These, and many other developments which might be quoted, are in the highest degree encouraging. Reasonable people . . . even conservative people . . . can view them with confidence. The time is past for blind apprehension and fear.

So give the children their chance. If you have the money tucked away somewhere, bring it out and invest it in their future. If you haven't . . . well, isn't it worth a little added sacrifice? . . . Now is the time to act!

UPTURN ITEM NO. 21

Bishops Nearing BAA Gonfalon

ATHENS, Feb. 15.—The Battling Bishops from Ohio Wesleyan were assured of at least a tie for the 1934 Buckeye Athletic Association basketball championship today, following their convincing 29 to 17 victory over the Ohio University Bobcats here last night.

The Bishops need only one more victory to give them the undisputed possession of the title.

The game last night was slow and rather loosely-played, with Berens, Ohio center, holding Stark, Wesleyan's pivot-man to two free throw. Stammler, Bishop guard, stole the spotlight by scoring 14 points to take game honors.

FIRST HALF EVEN

The first half of the contest was fought on almost even terms, but Wesleyan cashed in on free throws during the last period to take the game in easy fashion.

Although there were personal fouls scattered throughout the game, not a single player was forced from the floor.

SPRINGFIELD, Feb. 15.—Because the Bearcats quit throwing the ball away in the second half and the Lutherans didn't quit, Cincinnati today had defeated Wittenberg in a ragged Buckeye Conference basketball here last night, 38 to 34.

Trailing 21 to 12 at the half, the Cincinnati quintet tightened up in the final period to grab the lead and the game in the last five minutes of play.

The game was a free-throwing affair, with two Bearcat boys and two Lutherans sharing scoring honors. Summerville, Cincinnati forward, collected 12 points, while Austing, his teammate center, and James and Pitzer, Wittenberg center and guard, respectively, were each scoring 11 points.

GOMEZ HOLD OUT

NEW YORK, Feb. 15.—Officials of the New York Yankees revealed today that Vernon Gomez, star lefthander, wasn't fooling when he announced in Chicago the other day that he wouldn't play ball for the money the Yanks had offered him.

Gomez's unsigned contract came back in the mails today along with the signed agreements of five other members of the club. The signers are Sam Byrd, outfielder, Johnny Broaca, Marvin Duke, Jimmy Deshong and Vito Tamulis, pitchers.

The club also announced that George McQuinn, a rookie first baseman from Binghampton, N. Y., had been sent to Newark of the International league on option.

COLUMBUS, Feb. 15. — The speaker of the evening at the Fifth Annual Conservation convention at the Neil House, Feb. 21, will be Senator Frederick Walcott, Chairman of the Special Committee on Conservation of Wild Life resources of the United States Senate. Governor White will also speak, sharing the honors with Senator Walcott.

Senator Walcott was formerly game commissioner of Connecticut, and has made a thorough study of conservation needs of migratory game, as well as upland game and big game. He is working in close touch with President Roosevelt's Special Committee on Wild Life Conservation.

Toastmaster at the convention banquet will be Attorney General J. W. Bricker.

CANDIDATES ALSO

A. F. Moon, Conover, chairman of the Conservation council, will preside. Other speakers will be Lieutenant Governor Charles Sawyer, Cincinnati; Hon. William Pickrel, Dayton, former lieutenant governor, and former congressman, Martin L. Davey of Kent.

Director of agriculture, Earl H. Hanefeld; State Senator V. D. Emmons, Secretary of the Senate Conservation Committee; Earl D. Haefner, Secretary of the Fish and Game Committee of the House of Representatives, and Mrs. Nora Halter, representing the "Save Outdoor Ohio" Council, will be on the program.

The Conservation Convention proper will open at 1:30 p. m. The banquet will be at 6:30 p. m. on the 21st. The League of Ohio Sportsmen will convene at 9 a. m. and the Izaak Walton League will hold a meeting at 10 a. m.

The Conservation Council will be in session during the afternoon and evening of the 20th, and the League of Ohio Sportsmen will have a meeting of the Executive Board on the night of the 20th.

OPEN TO OTHERS

Anyone interested in Ohio's conservation program is welcome, whether a member of a sportsmen's club or not, it was stated at the Division of Conservation today. Reservations for the banquet at $1.25 per plate can be made through the Division of Conservation. Remittance in advance should reach the Division not later than Tuesday, Feb. 20.

M. E. TEAM WINS

The Methodist church team defeated the Ashville A. C. Tuesday evening in St. Philip's parish house by a 19-16 score.

The local scoring was done by Stout and Henry with six points each, Hafey, W. Hegele, J. Hegele, Radcliff and Reichelderfer also playing.

Cloud, Wagner, Toole, Graham, and Rhoades comprised the Ashville quintet.

About This And That

BY THE SECOND GUESSER

THE question predominant in Pickaway-co basketball circles is "Can anyone defeat the Ashville teams?"

The boys have gone through their regular schedule undefeated. With the exception of two games, at Scioto-twp and at Saltcreek-twp, the Harrison-twp boys have not been pressed. They defeated the Commercial Pointers by a seven point edge and Saltcreek by five counters. They were also forced by Jackson for three periods but Nelson Walters, one of Jackson's two stars, went out of the game on personals in the fourth period and the Ashvillers proceded to score more points in that session than in the other three * * *

Coach Al Kauber has one of the smoothest teams in the county in a long while. We are not going to compare the Ashville team-play with the excellent passing attack exhibited by the departed New Holland varsity a year ago. There is no way to compare the 1933 New Holland team and the 1934 Ashville team, although the 1933 Ashvillers did defeat the New Holland quintet in the district tournament. Kauber's team was not near so strong last year as it is this season * * *

The "discovery" of Jim Scoles, center, made the Ashville five. On the bench last year and expected to be there again this season with big Ottis Ford back in the lineup Scoles got his break when Ford moved to Ironton. The new center, who has been the power-house of the Ashville offense, and defense, too, has outscored opposing centers more than 10 to one during the season * * *

Kauber's other starters include Wink Wellington, a fine floor man; Young, a sophomore forward and a real scoring threat; Dick Morrison, veteran guard, and Steinbrook, who moved to Ashville from Greenfield last summer. Wean, Baker and several others provide the shock troops * * *

Ashville should go through its first assignment with Pickaway-twp, but will meet stiffer opposition from the New Holland team in the second round, the west-county team drawing a bye through the first set of games * * *

* * *

The Ashville girls have lost one contest this year, that to Scioto-twp at Commercial Point with Lila Hiles, star center and captain, on the sidelines. The Scioto girls had previously lost at Ashville * *

* * *

Mrs. Morrison, Ashville coach, again has a strong team built around Hiles, Pauline Roese, Edwina Schlegel, the last of several sisters who have helped make Ashville girls' teams strong in recent years. These girls comprise the team's offensive with C. Roese and Wagner the stalwarts on the defense. The Wagner girl performed at Jackson until this year, and she has proved a bulwark on defense* * *

WITHOUT A DOUBT THE ASHVILLE TEAMS ARE THE ONES TO BEAT. WHO WILL DEFEAT THEM IF THEY CAN BE DEFEATED?

Prices for Ohio land turned upward in the second six months of 1933. From a survey by H. R. Moore of the department of rural economics at the Ohio State university, it was learned that the average price an acre in voluntary sales was $51.14 in the first six months of the year, and $55 an acre in the second six months.

SALTCREEK-TWP SCHOOL NOTES

Friday, Feb. 9, Ashville visited S. H. S. for the last game of the season. The boys' game was very well played, with Saltcreek in the lead up to the half of the last quarter. At the end of the third quarter Saltcreek was five points ahead. The final score was 31-28 in favor of Ashville. This was our only defeat this year. The girls' score was Ashville 20; Saltcreek 13.

There were 360 spectators present. We are looking forward to the tournament. Saltcreek will play her first game with Darby, Saturday, Feb. 17, at two o'clock.

The following pupils of the third and fourth grades have 100 per cent attendance for the school year: Geneva Stump, Bernice Jones, Mary Tatman, and Virginia Tatman.

Girl Scout News

The Logan Elm Girl scout troop No. 1 met at the Pickaway-twp school Tuesday afternoon under the leadership of Miss Kathleen Dilsaver.

During the patrol corners the girls worked on their first and second class work. Some passed their tests. Plans were discussed for a hike in the near future in order that some of the girls might pass their fire and cooking tests.

The meeting closed with the radio handshake and taps.

Davis, secretary of the Colorado Stockgrowers and Feeders' association.

Auto repairs must be cheaper now. You seldom see a $10 bill that some mechanic has used as a towel.

DARBY SCHOOL NEWS

The girls lost their basketball game with the Monroe girls last Friday evening, the score being 11 to 8. They will not be eligible to participate in the tournament because they failed to win enough of their games. The boys' score was 34 to 13 in Darby's favor. These were the last games of the season.

The boys will play Saltcreek in the tournament next Saturday afternoon. We hope to have a good following to cheer the boys on. If they are to win they will need to have plenty of backing from the sidelines in addition to excellent mental and physical condition.

March 2 is the date set for the games with the D. H. S. Alumni teams. This should prove to be a good drawing card because the Alumni always prove to be rather stiff competition. The admission to the games will be 15c and 10c.

The Seniors have ordered their invitations of the Crescent Co. an Iowa firm.

The Juniors are working on a plan to raise money for the Junior-Senior banquet. A part of the plan will probably be a class play to be given in the near future.

Do not forget the P. T. A. meeting scheduled for Wednesday, Feb. 21. The committee is preparing a good program for the occasion. All are invited to attend.

The total enrollment of the schools now is 287, of which number 83 are in the high school.

NEW RAIL RATES

The lowest passenger rates in the history of the railroad, inaugurated on February 1, and a million dollar program of improvements, including air-conditioning, new equipment, etc., are expected to bring a steady increase in passenger business of the Norfolk and Western Railway. Officials of the railroad expressed this opinion today in a statement on the N. & W.'s aggressive campaign to regain lost passenger traffic.

"On February 1," the statement said, "the Norfolk and Western Railway reduced coach passenger fares to two cents per mile, or approximately 44 per cent from the base rate—the lowest rates in the history of the railroad. The fares in Pullman cars were reduced to three cents a mile and the surcharge was eliminated. The new tariffs are good on all trains over the entire system."

Are YOUR CHILDREN to be members of a LOST GENERATION?

IN AMERICA, for the past four years, we have had an economic upheaval which has disorganized the whole fabric of our daily lives. We have all had a hard time of it. And it is the children who have suffered most!

We have managed to keep food in their mouths, and a roof over their heads. We have contrived to teach them their three R's. But in all the less tangible things of life . . . . the things that build for character and future happiness . . . the children have not had an even break.

Are they to go through life with only half of their natures developed . . . without knowledge or appreciation of music, of books, of plays and pictures . . . just because they had the bad luck to be young during a period of hard times? Is theirs to be a Lost Generation?

Your children deserve their chance. If they have any music in them, they ought to have music lessons, to go to concerts and recitals. If they can draw, or model, or paint, they should have some special instruction. If they love books they ought to have good books to read, and if they love the theater, they ought to the taken to see the best plays.

These are things that make all the difference in the world when a child's character is in the making. Without them life is robbed not only of present interest, but of the capacity to live fully and enjoyably in after years.

In the past 4 years many parents have not been able to give their children these advantages. Others have refrained from doing so because of a natural anxiety about the future.

But now there is every indication that the cause for that anxiety have largely ceased to exist. A great many signs point to that economic upturn for which we have all been looking so long and eagerly.

The Motion Picture Industry is working to full capacity for the first time in 3 years, with 25 percent more pictures in preparation than in 1932.

Automobile production during August showed a gain of 150 percent over August 1932.

Factory workers in the United States were in August receiving 40 million dollars a week more in their pay envelopes than in March.

These, and many other developments which might be quoted, are in the highest degree encouraging. Reasonable people . . . even conservative people . . . can view them with confidence. The time is past for blind apprehension and fear.

So give the children their chance. If you have the money tucked away somewhere, bring it out and invest it in their future. If you haven't . . . well, isn't it worth a little added sacrifice? . . . Now is the time to act!

Lieut. Murrell Not Guilty

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Feb. 15.—Lieut. John H. Murrel, former West Point football hero, stood acquitted by a federal court jury today on a charge of attacking Mrs. Blanche Ralls Boisclair, attractive Birmingham, Ala., divorcee.

Requiring only 55 minutes to return its verdict, the jury of twelve men late yesterday cleared the young army officer on both charges for which he was tried, attempted attack and attack.

The trial, heard before Judge R. J. McMillan, lasted but three days.

Testifying in his own defense, Lieut. Murrel emphatically denied the charges of Mrs. Boisclair that he assaulted her on the Fort Sam Houston military reservation October 22 after a night club party. The officer said his companion was intoxicated and explained he was driving her home so his mother could care for her.

VERDICT APPLAUDED

Women spectators who had waited in the courtroom for the jury's decision cheered the verdict when it was read. Bailiffs tried in vain to halt the rush of spectators as they pressed forward to congratulate Lieut. Murrel on his acquittal. Mrs. Boisclair was not in the courtroom when the verdict was read.

When he heard the words pronouncing his acquittal Lieut. Murrel joyously embraced his mother, who had been with him in the courtroom since the trial began Monday morning.

Three hours were required for final arguments, after which Judge McMillan curtly instructed the jury to do nothing more than determine the innocence or guilt of the infantry officer.

With the trial concluded Lieut. Murrel was ordered to return to his post at Fort Sam Houston. Since his release on bail last November Lieut. Murrel had been acting as assistant adjutant of the second army division.

LETTER DESCRIBES CHINESE CHRISTMAS

INSIDE—CHINESE LETTER

Editor's Note:—The following letter written to George P. Grant-Girard by Mrs. David S. Tappan is a vivid account of how the Christmas holiday is observed in China.

HAINAN, China,
Dec. 27, 1933

Well didn't we have an exciting and interesting and happy Christmas week tho. It couldn't have been nicer! Began when the Thomas family came out from Kachek, five of them, to meet the two boys down from Shanghai for holidays. They were on the compound with us and ate with us. Then the three Bercovitz youngsters back from school, too, rode up on horses or bikes every day or else ours rode down with them and soccer was the program always.

Tuesday everybody drove in the three cars out to the pagoda several miles west of the city, a lovely spot on a high place overlooking stretches of river bed dotted with bright green rice fields and wooded banks and birds so many kinds and so gorgeous. We had a picnic supper under the towering old stone tower with the villagers lined up back of us watching the strange animals eat.

Three bikes and three ponies and three cars made quite a caravan as we paraded through the city street on our way home and the people stopped and gaped at us and commented as we went by—all samee President of the USA or such!

ENTER INTERIOR

We finished our school Wednesday until after New Year's and Thursday David took our car with Steiner, Mirtz and Stanton and went forty miles interior to meet the Thomas family in a search for some pine trees the Thomas' had spotted last summer. They drove 35 miles farther and picniced on a high knoll with towering pines and mountains and valleys and a stone fire place to cook their dinner on. Came back with five beautiful pines for Christmas trees for all except the Burkwalls who had an artificial one sent from home. Next day we all decorated our trees and in the afternoon went to a birthday party for a seven year old little boy whose father is in the Customs, English family.

Saturday everyone was off for the Hummocks for the day to celebrate Junior Bercovitz' fifteenth birthday at the old extinct volcanoes nineteen miles west. The roads were much too bumpy for me to attempt and I was glad for a breathing spell to wrap presents at home. Sunday David went to the country for Communion and got off at 7 a. m. The church was decorated elaborately with flags and festoons of greens and tropical palms and all the street children were there in their rags and best manners hoping for a gift of some kind. But this year we were trying having everyone bring gifts for the poor and the next morning everyone gathered for a program at the church and the response was wonderful as they walked up and piled up the presents of all kinds from rice to clothes and money. But the poor little street urchins went home without even an orange or a picture card and I wished we hadn't left them out quite so completely.

The pastor and his wife passed out forty or fifty candy bags to the church children but had not enough for the strangers, sad to say, for they went down into their own pockets for that treat which was a pretty big gift for them. (He gets a salary of thirty dollars a month and she earns ten teaching music.)

Christmas Sunday afternoon we all gathered at the Bercovitz home where the seven youngsters ranging in age from seven to sixteen put on a lovely pageant with songs and verses and that was our Christmas service. That night we got lovely Christmas music from Manila and Hongkong and Nanking and the next night even lovelier programs, one from the Royal orchestra in Bangkok which was perfect.

HEAR WIDE PROGRAM

Funny thing that while we were listening to a British All Empire broadcast from London rebroadcast from Hongkong and Manila, we could hear Bangkok as a sweet background of Xmas carols. We heard a miner in the pit of some English mine and a lighthouse keeper on the north coast tell about what he saw, then Dublin where folks were starting to church on a crisp bright Christ-

He identified the National Parks Airways as "the possible exception" and charged all the other contracts were awarded "on agreement and not on competitive bidding" as the law prescribes.

BY PAUL C. YATES.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—One of the two men sentenced by the senate to ten days in jail for contempt - L. H. Brittin, executive vice president of the Northwest Air lines - decided today not to fight any further. He intends to surrender to start his 10-day sentence in jail.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—(INS.)—Facing a 10 day jail sentence following their conviction by the Senate on contempt charges, former Assistant Secretary of Commerce William P. MacCracken, Jr., and Col. L. H. Brittin, Northwest Airways official, today began a frantic fight to have the penalty set aside by the courts.

Two other defendants in the dramatic Senate trials developing from the air mail scandals, rejoiced in their acquittal. They were Harris M. Hanshue, president of Western Air Express, and Gilbert L. Givvin, Washington representative of Hanshue's company.

Imposition of the jail sentence was postponed four days to allow appeal to the courts. The prisoners in the meantime were lodged at a hotel in custody of Senate Sergeant-at-Arms Chesley W. Jurney.

USES TWO COURSES

Frank J. Hogan, MacCracken's attorney, planned to start two separate court moves--one an application for a habeas corpus writ permitting bond while the case is on appeal, and the other the filing of an appeal from a writ denied by Federal District Judge O'Donoghue.

A writ for Brittin's release will be filed by his counsel, former Assistant Attorney General Seth W. Richardson.

The Senate disposed of the four contempt cases in closed executive session. Vice President Garner declared this program was in line with a resolution adopted when the trial began. Senator Robinson (D) of Arkansas, added that the leaders felt a vote in secret, with the record later thrown open to public inspection, would expediate the proceedings.

MacCracken, for several years secretary of the American Bar association and now a lawyer-lobbyist for a number of big aviation companies, was convicted 64 to 20.

DENIED COURT MOVE

Before his guilt was decided by this overwhelming vote, the Senate defeated 62 to 22 a resolution seeking transfer of his case to the courts.

The resolution to jail MacCracken for 10 days carried 56 to 26.

Brittin was convicted by a 65 to 18 vote and his punishment approved 60 to 21.

Hanshue was acquitted 45 to 35.

The two resolutions dealing with MacCracken's conviction were offered by Senator Black (D) of Alabama, chairman of the air mail investigating committee.

Senator McCarren (D) of Nevada, a member of the committee, offered the Brittin and Hanshue resolutions. Black then moved that Givvin be discharged from the contempt cases. This resolution was approved 61 to 18.

Only a few spectators were present when the verdicts were announced. MacCracken was pale and visibly [illegible] were a glum Richardson also appeared to be crestfallen.

Hanshue and Givvin, on the other hand, were obviously cheerful and confident.

When the resolution finding MacCracken guilty and assessing the jail terms were read, Garner pronounced sentence.

"That's the order of the Senate," he stated.

The same procedure was followed in Brittin's case.

MacCracken's face flushed deeply when he was sentenced. Later, however, he remarked, "I'm still on my pins."

The Senate turned deaf ears to [illegible] spared the lockup until [illegible] to act on [illegible] tions.

Robinson then [illegible] ney take charge of [illegible] and that four days [illegible] allowed in which they [illegible] court relief.

46 MILLIONS GONE

Farley claimed the aviation companies had been overpaid $46,800,000 during the period from July 1, 1930, to Dec. 31, 1933. He identified the National Parks Airways as "the possible exception" and charged all the other contracts were awarded "on agreement and not on competitive bidding" as the law prescribes.

BY PAUL C. YATES.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—One of the two men sentenced by the senate to ten days in jail for contempt - L. H. Brittin, executive vice president of the Northwest Air lines - decided today not to fight any further. He intends to surrender to start his 10-day sentence in jail.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—(INS.)—Facing a 10 day jail sentence following their conviction by the Senate on contempt charges, former Assistant Secretary of Commerce William P. MacCracken, Jr., and Col. L. H. Brittin, Northwest Airways official, today began a frantic fight to have the penalty set aside by the courts.

Two other defendants in the dramatic Senate trials developing from the air mail scandals, rejoiced in their acquittal. They were Harris M. Hanshue, president of Western Air Express, and Gilbert L. Givvin, Washington representative of Hanshue's company.

Imposition of the jail sentence was postponed four days to allow appeal to the courts. The prisoners in the meantime were lodged at a hotel in custody of Senate Sergeant-at-Arms Chesley W. Jurney.

USES TWO COURSES

Frank J. Hogan, MacCracken's attorney, planned to start two separate court moves—one an application for a habeas corpus writ permitting bond while the case is on appeal, and the other, the filing of an appeal from a writ denied by Federal District Judge O'Donoghue.

A writ for Brittin's release will be filed by his counsel, former Assistant Attorney General Seth W. Richardson.

The Senate disposed of the four contempt cases in closed executive session. Vice President Garner declared this program was in line with a resolution adopted when the trial began. Senator Robinson (D) of Arkansas, added that the leaders felt a vote in secret, with the record later thrown open to public inspection, would expediate the proceedings.

MacCracken, for several years secretary of the American Bar association and now a lawyer-lobbyist for a number of big aviation companies, was convicted 64 to 20.

DENIED COURT MOVE

Before his guilt was decided by this overwhelming vote, the Senate defeated 62 to 22 a resolution seeking transfer of his case to the courts.

The resolution to jail MacCracken for 10 days carried 56 to 26.

Brittin was convicted by a 65 to 18 vote and his punishment approved 60 to 21.

Hanshue was acquitted 45 to 35.

The two resolutions dealing with MacCracken's conviction were offered by Senator Black (D) of Alabama, chairman of the air mail investigating committee.

Senator McCarren (D) of Nevada, a member of the committee, offered the Brittin and Hanshue resolutions. Black then moved that Givvin be discharged from the contempt cases. This resolution was approved 61 to 18.

Only a few spectators were present when the verdicts were announced. MacCracken was pale and visibly upset, while Hogan wore a glum look. Brittin and Richardson also appeared to be crestfallen.

Hanshue and Givvin, on the other hand, were obviously cheerful and confident.

When the resolution finding MacCracken guilty and assessing the jail terms were read, Garner pronounced sentence.

"That's the order of the Senate," he stated.

The same procedure was followed in Brittin's case.

MacCracken's face flushed deeply when he was sentenced. Later, however, he remarked, "I'm still on my pins."

The Senate turned deaf ears to Hogan's plea that MacCracken be released on bail pending test of the Senate's action. It was Richardson asked that both prisoners be spared the indignity of a lockup until the courts could act on habeas corpus petitions.

Robinson then moved that Hogan and that four days of grace be allowed in which they could seek court relief.

LETTER DESCRIBES CHINESECHRISTMAS

INSIDE—CHINESE LETTER

Editor's Note:—The following letter written to George F. Grana-Girard by Mrs. David S. Tappan is a vivid account of how the Christmas holiday is observed in China.

HAINAN, China,
Dec. 27, 1933

Well didn't we have an exciting and interesting and happy Christmas week tho. It couldn't have been nicer! Began when the Thomas family came out from Kachek, five of them, to meet the two boys down from Shanghai for holidays. They were on the compound with us and ate with us. Then the three Bercovitz youngsters back from school, too, rode up on horses or bikes every day or else ours rode down with them and soccer was the program always.

Tuesday everybody drove in the three cars out to the pagoda several miles west of the city, a lovely spot on a high place overlooking stretches of river bed dotted with bright green rice fields and wooded banks and birds so many kinds and so gorgeous. We had a picnic supper under the towering old stone tower with the villagers lined up back of us watching the strange animals eat.

Three bikes and three ponies and three cars made quite a caravan as we paraded through the city street on our way home and the people stopped and gaped at us and commented as we went by—all samee President of the USA or such!

ENTER INTERIOR

We finished our school Wednesday until after New Year's and Thursday David took our car with Steiner, Mirtz and Stanton and went forty miles interior to meet the Thomas family in a search for some pine trees the Thomas' had spotted last summer. They drove 35 miles farther and picniced on a high knoll with towering pines and mountains and valleys and a stone fire place to cook their dinner on. Came back with five beautiful pines for Christmas trees for all except the Burkwalls who had an artificial one sent from home. Next day we all decorated our trees and in the afternoon went to a birthday party for a seven year old little boy whose father is in the Customs, English family.

Saturday everyone was off for the Hummocks for the day to celebrate Junior Bercovitz' fifteenth birthday at the old extinct volcanoes nineteen miles west. The roads were much too bumpy for me to attempt and I was glad for a breathing spell to wrap presents at home. Sunday David went to the country for Communion and got off at 7 a. m. The church was decoraied elaborately with flags and festoons of greens and tropical palms and all the street children were there in their rags and best manners hoping for a gift of some kind. But this year we were trying having everyone bring gifts for the poor and the next morning everyone gathered for a program at the church and the response was wonderful as they walked up and piled up the presents of all kinds from rice to clothes and money. But the poor little street urchins went home without even an orange or a picture card and I wished we hadn't left them out quite so completely.

The pastor and his wife passed out forty or fifty candy bags to the church children but had not enough for the strangers, sad to say, for they went down into their own pockets for that treat which was a pretty big gift for them. (He gets a salary of thirty dollars a month and she earns ten teaching music.)

Christmas Sunday afternoon we all gathered at the Bercovitz home where the seven youngsters ranging in age from seven to sixteen put on a lovely pageant with songs and verses and that was our Christmas service. That night we got lovely Christmas music from Manila and Hongkong and Nanking and the next night even lovelier programs, one from the Royal orchestra in Bangkok which was perfect.

HEAR WIDE PROGRAM

Funny thing that while we were listening to a British All Empire broadcast from London rebroadcast from Hongkong and Manila, we could hear Bangkok as a sweet background of Xmas carols. We heard a miner in the pit of some English mine and a lighthouse keeper on the north coast tell about what he saw, then Dublin where folks were starting to church on a crisp bright Christmas morning then to Ottowo and South to New Zealand and Australia then to Africa where it went and in hearing the king wish all his subjects a merry Christmas as we did last year.

It was fascinating and made one get a feel of the universe and stretch his warped mind a bit with Christmas gladness from all parts of the globe.

We ate our own duck dinner at home but the family had turkey later with the Bercos in Hoihow while I begged off to read the big fat family letters and shower of cards that came in the midst of everything right on Christmas morning. The day after Christmas we all gathered at the gate of the government yamen to see 200 Aborigines brought out by the government in their picturesque native costumes for an educational visit to Canton and back. The women wore dozens of ear rings 8 to 10 inches in diameter so the lobe of the ear was stretched four to five inches hanging down with the weight of brass and silver. Their close fitting skirts and coats all home spun and embroidered in their own make of bright colors in a sort of Czecko-Slovak embroidery, most fascinating. We were as big a show to them as they were to us.

HOPPLE WRITES

three years as a member of the commission, he has dissented only once from the majority decision on major cases. The single instance, he pointed out, was the Ohio Bell Telephone case.

Asserting that "it is distasteful to me personally and beyond the dignity of the office I hold to enter an unseemly controversy with portions of the public press or any person, group or association," Hopple declared.

"Nevertheless, referring to what was published in the press that I would defend the utility against public hysteria—this is untrue because I made no such statement.

QUOTES ADDRESS

"What I did say was that if we could remove the demagog and racketeer and political opportunist, rate-making would be greatly improved in Ohio and in that I was referring to both sides in rate case proceedings; that these matters could then be considered on the basis of facts and unbiased judgment and that the public utilities law required the commission to hear and decide cases according to the law and the evidence of the case and without giving heed to any acts or words prompted by selfishness from either side, and that there is no proper place in a rate case for consideration of selfishness, propaganda or hysteria, and that fairness to the public on the one hand and fairness to the public utilities serving the public on the other hand, is my concept of my official duty."

cumbed the doctors said they were confident the banker was holding his own. He had suffered five setbacks during the day.

Death came while Dr. William R. Cubbins and two associates resorted to artificial stimulants.

STRENGTH AMAZING

Fighting against the Friedlander bacillus type of pneumonia, which is usually fatal, Traylor's vitality during the long illness had amazed his physicians.

Mrs. Dorothy Traylor with her son, Melvin, Jr., and daughter, Nancy, were at the bedside when the banker died. Several friends and associates also were present.

Born in a log cabin on a Kentucky hill farm, Traylor rose to a position of national and international importance in the world of finance. In 1929 he was one of two American bankers who took part in organizing the Bank of International Settlements at a meeting in Switzerland.

At the Democratic national convention here in 1932 there was a strong sentiment for his nomination for the presidency.

Traylor entered the banking field at Hillsboro, Texas, at the age of 27 after practicing law for four years.

Leaders in all walks of life here were mourning his death today. He held directorships in a dozen large corporations and was a trustee of Northwestern university.

KNAVE'S GIRL

By JOAN CLAYTON

COPYRIGHT 1932, KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

SYNOPSIS

Unable to find employment, young and beautiful Patricia Warren capitalizes her card skill, at fifty cents an hour, by making a fourth at bridge parties given by the wealthy Mrs. Eileen Sycott. Julian Haverholt, noted bridge expert, is fascinated by Patricia and impressed by her game. He offers to make her his secretary and partner, suggesting that she live at his home. Aware of Haverholt's unsavory reputation, Patricia hesitates to accept the position. Haverholt escorts Patricia to the drab home she shares with her nagging stepmother and stepsisters. In the hallway, he suddenly embraces Pat. Indignant, she declines his business offer and rushes indoors. Mrs. Warren, Pat's stepmother, thinking of her own comfort, is furious at Pat's refusal. Bill McGee, a small-time politician and thug, invites Patricia to a New Year's Eve dance. She declines but he retorts, "You'll go, kid, and like it." Patricia is thrilled with the prospect of meeting her ideal, Clark Tracy, the famous polo player, at another bridge party to be given by Mrs. Sycott. Entering the Sycott living room, Patricia finds Clark there alone. When Mrs. Sycott enters and finds them deeply absorbed in conversation, she is angry because Pat came earlier than instructed. Pat's castles crumble when she is introduced to Marthe March, Clark's fiancee. Next day, Bill McGee sends Pat an evening gown for the dance.

CHAPTER SIX

"I'll go," said Patricia listlessly. "I'll even wear that dress."

"Don't you want to try it on? Maybe it will need some altering," suggested the other in a more gentle tone than usual. Something in the girl's eyes made her vaguely uncomfortable.

"I'll wear it as it is," Patricia said flatly. "I don't care how I look tonight."

Nor did she. When nine o'clock came she donned the evening frock with the same listless spirit with which she had received it. The dress was a trifle large. Black was not her color. The neckline was too daring for eighteen years. Patricia did not care. Ordinarily she would have ripped off the large silk roses that decorated and ruined the waistline; ordinarily she would have scorned the cheap dramatics of black and red on a red-haired girl. Not tonight.

Bill McGee, who arrived promptly at ten, was loudly delighted with his choice in gowns and girl. He had been drinking a little and was obviously prepared to celebrate. Tonight, Patricia thought to herself, the small time gangster might really have passed for a big time gangster. Diamond studs sparkled in his white dress shirt, a large diamond solitaire, flanked by a ruby, adorned the small finger of his right hand. A silk handkerchief edged in purple peeped from his pocket, a muffler, similarly edged, was suspended over his arm. He wore a slave bracelet.

"Well, how do I strike you?" he asked complacently, as he strutted about the room.

"You look very gay," Patricia informed him dryly.

"That's how I feel. You and me are going to paint this old town red before we're through," he declared to the glee of the little sisters, who were watching, wide-eyed and giggling.

"What does that mean?" demanded Teresa.

"Nothing, sweetheart," whispered Patricia, bending to kiss the small upturned face.

"Let's get a move on," said McGee impatiently. "My feet are itching something terrible."

"Mind now, you get Patricia in early," warned Patricia's stepmother, vaguely disturbed by the expedition she had insisted upon.

"I'll get her in with the milkman," promised McGee, giving Mrs. Warren a jocular poke in the ribs.

On that note they departed. Outside Bill hailed a cab, gave an uptown address.

"I thought we were going to a neighborhood dance," said Patricia sharply.

"Right you are. But I thought we'd catch a quick one at this place first."

His tone was bland. His eyes warned her to protest no further. They drove uptown and then west in the fifties, almost to the river front. At length they halted before a shabby, unlighted building. It was possible, probable that the building housed a speakeasy. But Patricia felt sure they had not come here for a drink. Why had they come?

Bewildered, frightened she knew not why, she allowed Bill McGee to guide her to a grilled basement entrance. He rang the bell. Presently the door opened narrowly and an unshaven, suspicious face appeared in the crack.

"Let us in," ordered Bill.

"I don't know you."

"Jim Blake's a friend of mine. Get a move on. Can't you see the lady's freezing?"

The attendant looked uncertainly at Patricia. Fatal hesitation! Promptly Bill McGee thrust his foot into the door and forced it open. Pushing Patricia ahead, ignoring the expostulations of the other man, he stepped into the bar, a small, badly lighted room where men at scattered tables talked and drank. Patricia's heart beat thickly, uncomfortably. She was the only woman present.

"Sit down," said McGee.

She obeyed. She laid her pocketbook on the table but she kept her thin coat held close. Why had they come here? It was plain that they were unwelcome. She felt sure that the three roughly dressed men at the adjoining table were discussing them. Bill McGee sauntered to the bar and after a short colloquy rejoined her.

"Let's go," she said urgently, half rising. She was really alarmed now. She had observed the glances directed at his back.

"Not till I finish my business," he informed her grimly. "I gotta see a man." He added jocularly, "Never you mind, baby. We'll make expenses for the evening before we leave."

"I'm going."

"No, you're not! Here comes my pal now."

His pal was a slight, pale man with cold, blue, unpleasant eyes. The pale man crossed the room in a kind of deathly silence, reached them. He laid one white ringed hand on the table.

"Get out of here, McGee," he said gently. "Get out and stay out."

Bill stood up. He towered above the other man. "You know what will get me out," he said savagely. "Fork over, Sam, and fork over quick! You got a crust trying to horn in on this territory. Rafferty sent me and Rafferty's the big shot above 42nd Street."

"I'm boss here!"

"I'll show you who's boss here!"

Bill McGee reached toward his pocket. The slight man stepped deftly to one side. It seemed to Patricia that he was looking over their heads, at the table behind. Her eyes fell on the mirror surmounting the bar. Her blood seemed to freeze. One of the men at the table behind had a gun. It was pointed at Bill's unconscious back. She screamed. Instantly the man behind fired. Bill McGee gave a short, anguished cry, whirled around, took a staggering step and fell forward on his face. It was as simple as that.

Someone sprang for the switch. The lights went out. Darkness smote the room. Patricia sat in frozen horror, screaming, screaming. Around her there were rushing footsteps, oaths, then silence . . .

"Bill," Patricia screamed and then again, "Bill."

There was no answer. The darkness kept its own counsel. It was then that the girl sprang to her feet and began to run. She bumped into tables and chairs, frantically, blindly pushing them aside, only to stumble once more. How she found the door she never knew. It was a rear door, standing open on a narrow, winding alley.

She fled down the alley to the deserted street. She reached the sidewalk as a patrol wagon screamed around a corner. She saw it stop. Again she ran. Eleventh Avenue was silent as the grave. There was only the panic beat of her feet and the silently falling snow.

Home, home, that was all that she could think—if only she could reach the blessed security of home. Exhaustion slowed her feet; fear drove them on. She never thought of the subway, or of a taxi. She had no money; she had left her pocketbook behind. She did not think of that either. Not then. She thought of it at the end of her frantic flight when she saw the lights that blazed from the familiar living room.

She stopped, trembling and appalled, at the very threshold of the haven toward which she had bent all her energies. Had the police come for her already? Had they found her pocketbook? Were they inside now? She attempted to peer through the windows but the shades were tightly drawn. What did the blaze of lights mean?

She stood very still. She tried to plan, to think logically and coherently, tried to convince herself that she must go away, must go some place else. At last she knew she could go no where else. There was no where else for her to go. Hugging the side of the house she crept past the lighted windows to the dreary garden in the rear. There were no lights in the bedroom.

The back door was unlocked and presently she was in the darkness of the bedroom. She listened for sounds from the living room, heard nothing. Presently she quietly turned on the light and looked into the sleeping faces of her little sisters. She sank to a chair, feeling a strange sense of peace. The horror was gone now. Just seeing the children's rosy, sleeping faces blotted out the dreadful picture of Bill McGee lying in a pool of spreading crimson, blotted out the hysteria and the madness that had followed.

She was sitting there when the door from the living room opened. Dully, uncomprehendingly she looked up into her stepmother's eyes. Lillian Warren went first white, then red. She closed the door, crossed the room.

"Get out," she said to Patricia in a low savage whisper. "What do you mean coming here? The cops are looking for you—there's one waiting in the living room now. Get out, I say."

"I—I——"

"You can't stay here, my girl. You can't ruin my business and drag my children into this. You got yourself into a mess and now you can get yourself out of it!"

Patricia rose stiffly. It was no use to argue. She went as she had come. She had no money, no place to go; she wore an evening dress and over it an ill fitting, light spring coat. She reached the sidewalk. She was standing there, shivering and afraid, when all New York broke into riotous celebration. Whistles blew, bells rang, cars stopped in the street, honking. From adjoining apartments people leaned from windows beating on tin pans. All New York welcomed in the New Year.

Mastoiditis Common In "Season of Colds"

Dr. Copeland Urges Prompt Treatment and Warns Against Home Remedies

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City

THIS IS the season when mastoid is especially prevalent among young children. It is probable that the increase in the number of cases of mastoiditis at this time of year can be traced to the prevalence of colds, coughs and tonsilitis in bad and stormy weather.

Dr. Copeland

We used to believe that mastoiditis was a serious and fatal disease. We know now that when the disturbance is recognized in its early stages and proper measures are taken, speedy cure is possible. Despite the tremendous advances made in the treatment of mastoiditis, many still fear the disease. They are alarmed by the conflicting stories concerning the disorder.

May I assure the worried parent that the disease can be successfully treated by operation. The mastoid operation has been so perfected that it is no longer a dangerous procedure. Danger exists only when the disease is neglected or the operation delayed.

May Follow a Severe Cold

Mastoid disease or "mastoiditis", as it is more commonly called, is an inflammation within the mastoid bone. This bone is the prominence felt behind the ear. It contains the mastoid "antrum" or air space, which connects with the middle ear. No doubt you know that the middle ear communicates with the nose through the "eustachian tube".

Germs of the common cold, cough or tonsilitis travel from the nose or throat through the eustachian tube to the ear. There they set up an inflammation which may extend into the mastoid.

Mastoiditis frequently occurs after a severe cold or infection of the nose or throat. It is especially common after an attack of influenza or pneumonia.

Symptoms of Mastoiditis

As a rule, the sufferer first complains of a severe ear ache. The pain is relieved when a discharge appears from the affected ear. Unless drainage is sufficient, the pain returns. There may be marked swelling behind the ear.

When the disease occurs in adults, it is easy to determine the source of trouble. An adult can accurately locate and describe the pain. But when the victim is young he is frightened and inaccurately describes the pain.

The young sufferer is restless, irritable and runs a high fever. The picture is confusing and unless X-ray pictures are taken the diagnosis may be confused with some other ailment. The X-ray helps to show whether the mastoid really is involved.

Relief and cure sometimes occur without operation. But in no instance, should home remedies be resorted to and no treatment should be given unless under the supervision of a physician. If he decides an operation is necessary, do not delay.

"KNAVE'S GIRL"
By JOAN CLAYTON

COPYRIGHT 1932, KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

SYNOPSIS

Unable to find employment, young and beautiful Patricia Warren capitalizes her card skill, at fifty cents an hour, by making a fourth at bridge parties given by the wealthy Mrs. Eileen Sycott. Julian Haverholt, noted bridge expert, is fascinated by Patricia and impressed by her game. He offers to make her his secretary and partner, suggesting that she live at his home. Aware of Haverholt's unsavory reputation, Patricia hesitates to accept the position. Haverholt escorts Patricia to the drab home she shares with her nagging stepmother and stepsisters. In the hallway, he suddenly embraces Pat. Indignant, she declines his business offer and rushes indoors. Mrs. Warren, Pat's stepmother, thinking of her own comfort, is furious at Pat's refusal. Bill McGee, a small-time politician and thug, invites Patricia to a New Year's Eve dance. She declines but he retorts, "You'll go, kid, and like it." Patricia is thrilled with the prospect of meeting her ideal, Clark Tracy, the famous polo player, at another bridge party to be given by Mrs. Sycott. Entering the Sycott living room, Patricia finds Clark there alone. When Mrs. Sycott enters and finds them deeply absorbed in conversation, she is angry because Pat came earlier than instructed. Pat's castles crumble when she is introduced to Marthe March, Clark's fiancee. Next day, Bill McGee sends Pat an evening gown for the dance.

CHAPTER SIX

"I'll go," said Patricia listlessly. "I'll even wear that dress."

"Don't you want to try it on? Maybe it will need some altering," suggested the other in a more gentle tone than usual. Something in the girl's eyes made her vaguely uncomfortable.

"I'll wear it as it is," Patricia said flatly. "I don't care how I look tonight."

Nor did she. When nine o'clock came she donned the evening frock with the same listless spirit with which she had received it. The dress was a trifle large. Black was not her color. The neckline was too daring for eighteen years. Patricia did not care. Ordinarily she would have ripped off the large silk roses that decorated and ruined the waistline; ordinarily she would have scorned the cheap dramatics of black and red on a red-haired girl. Not tonight.

Bill McGee, who arrived promptly at ten, was loudly delighted with his choice in gowns and girl. He had been drinking a little and was obviously prepared to celebrate. Tonight, Patricia thought to herself, the small time gangster might really have passed for a big time gangster. Diamond studs sparkled in his white dress shirt, a large diamond solitaire, flanked by a ruby, adorned the small finger of his right hand. A silk handkerchief edged in purple peeped from his pocket, a muffler, similarly edged, was suspended over his arm. He wore a slave bracelet.

"Well, how do I strike you?" he asked complacently, as he strutted about the room.

"You look very gay," Patricia informed him dryly.

"That's how I feel. You and me are going to paint this old town red before we're through," he declared to the glee of the little sisters, who were watching, wide-eyed and giggling.

"What does that mean?" demanded Teresa.

"Nothing, sweetheart," whispered Patricia, bending to kiss the small upturned face.

"Let's get a move on," said McGee impatiently. "My feet are itching something terrible."

"Mind now, you get Patricia in early," warned Patricia's stepmother, vaguely disturbed by the expedition she had insisted upon.

"I'll get her in with the milkman," promised McGee, giving Mrs. Warren a jocular poke in the ribs.

On that note they departed. Outside Bill hailed a cab, gave an uptown address.

"I thought we were going to a neighborhood dance," said Patricia sharply.

"Right you are. But I thought we'd catch a quick one at this place first."

His tone was bland. His eyes warned her to protest no further. They drove uptown and then west in the fifties, almost to the river front. At length they halted before a shabby, unlighted building. It was possible, probable that the building housed a speakeasy. But Patricia felt sure they had not come here for a drink. Why had they come?

Bewildered, frightened she knew not why, she allowed Bill McGee to guide her to a grilled basement entrance. He rang the bell. Presently the door opened narrowly and an unshaven, suspicious face appeared in the crack.

"Let us in," ordered Bill.

"I don't know you."

"Jim Blake's a friend of mine. Get a move on. Can't you see the lady's freezing?"

The attendant looked uncertainly at Patricia. Fatal hesitation! Promptly Bill McGee thrust his foot into the door and forced it open. Pushing Patricia ahead, ignoring the expostulations of the other man, he stepped into the bar, a small, badly lighted room where men at scattered tables talked and drank. Patricia's heart beat thickly, uncomfortably. She was the only woman present.

"Sit down," said McGee.

She obeyed. She laid her pocketbook on the table but she kept her thin coat held close. Why had they come here? It was plain that they were unwelcome. She felt sure that the three roughly dressed men at the adjoining table were discussing them. Bill McGee sauntered to the bar and after a short colloquy rejoined her.

"Let's go," she said urgently, half rising. She was really alarmed now. She had observed the glances directed at his back.

"Not till I finish my business," he informed her grimly. "I gotta see a man." He added jocularly, "Never you mind, baby. We'll make expenses for the evening before we leave."

"I'm going."

"No, you're not! Here comes my pal now."

His pal was a slight, pale man with cold, blue, unpleasant eyes. The pale man crossed the room in a kind of deathly silence, reached them. He laid one white ringed hand on the table.

"Get out of here, McGee," he said gently. "Get out and stay out."

Bill stood up. He towered above the other man. "You know what will get me out," he said savagely. "Fork over, Sam, and fork over quick! You got a crust trying to horn in on this territory. Rafferty sent me and Rafferty's the big shot above 42nd Street."

"I'm boss here!"

"I'll show you who's boss here!"

Bill McGee reached toward his pocket. The slight man stepped deftly to one side. It seemed to Patricia that he was looking over their heads, at the table behind. Her eyes fell on the mirror surmounting the bar. Her blood seemed to freeze. One of the men at the table behind had a gun. It was pointed at Bill's unconscious back. She screamed. Instantly the man behind fired. Bill McGee gave a short, anguished cry, whirled around, took a staggering step and fell forward on his face. It was as simple as that.

Someone sprang for the switch. The lights went out. Darkness smote the room. Patricia sat in frozen horror, screaming, screaming. Around her there were rushing footsteps, oaths, then silence . . .

"Bill," Patricia screamed and then again, "Bill."

There was no answer. The darkness kept its own counsel. It was then that the girl sprang to her feet and began to run. She bumped into tables and chairs, frantically, blindly pushing them aside, only to stumble once more. How she found the door she never knew. It was a rear door, standing open on a narrow, winding alley.

She fled down the alley to the deserted street. She reached the sidewalk as a patrol wagon screamed around a corner. She saw it stop. Again she ran. Eleventh Avenue was silent as the grave. There was only the panic beat of her feet and the silently falling snow.

Home, home, that was all that she could think—if only she could reach the blessed security of home. Exhaustion slowed her feet; fear drove them on. She never thought of the subway, or of a taxi. She had no money; she had left her pocketbook behind. She did not think of that either. Not then. She thought of it at the end of her frantic flight when she saw the lights that blazed from the familiar living room.

She stopped, trembling and appalled, at the very threshold of the haven toward which she had bent all her energies. Had the police come for her already? Had they found her pocketbook? Were they inside now? She attempted to peer through the windows but the shades were tightly drawn. What did the blaze of lights mean?

She stood very still. She tried to plan, to think logically and coherently, tried to convince herself that she must go away, must go some place else. At last she knew she could go no where else. There was no where else for her to go. Hugging the side of the house she crept past the lighted windows to the dreary garden in the rear. There were no lights in the bedroom.

The back door was unlocked and presently she was in the darkness of the bedroom. She listened for sounds from the living room, heard nothing. Presently she quietly turned on the light and looked into the sleeping faces of her little sisters. She sank to a chair, feeling a strange sense of peace. The horror was gone now. Just seeing the children's rosy, sleeping faces blotted out the dreadful picture of Bill McGee lying in a pool of spreading crimson, blotted out the hysteria and the madness that had followed.

She was sitting there when the door from the living room opened. Dully, uncomprehendingly she looked up into her stepmother's eyes. Lillian Warren went first white, then red. She closed the door, crossed the room.

"Get out," she said to Patricia in a low savage whisper. "What do you mean coming here? The cops are looking for you—there's one waiting in the living room now. Get out, I say."

"I—I——".

"You can't stay here, my girl. You can't ruin my business and drag my children into this. You got yourself into a mess and now you can get yourself out of it!"

Patricia rose stiffly. It was no use to argue. She went as she had come. She had no money, no place to go; she wore an evening dress and over it an ill fitting, light spring coat. She reached the sidewalk. She was standing there, shivering and afraid, when all New York broke into riotous celebration. Whistles blew, bells rang, cars stopped in the street, honking. From adjoining apartments people leaned from windows beating on tin pans. All New York welcomed in the New Year.

Mastoiditis Common In "Season of Colds"

Dr. Copeland Urges Prompt Treatment and Warns Against Home Remedies

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City

THIS IS the season when mastoid is especially prevalent among young children. It is probable that the increase in the number of cases of mastoiditis at this time of year can be traced to the prevalence of colds, coughs and tonsilitis in bad and stormy weather.

We used to believe that mastoiditis was a serious and fatal disease. We know now that when the disturbance is recognized in its early stages and proper measures are taken, speedy cure is possible. Despite the tremendous advances made in the treatment of mastoiditis, many still fear the disease. They are alarmed by the conflicting stories concerning the disorder.

May I assure the worried parent that the disease can be successfully treated by operation. The mastoid operation has been so perfected that it is no longer a dangerous procedure. Danger exists only when the disease is neglected or the operation delayed.

May Follow a Severe Cold

Mastoid disease or "mastoiditis", as it is more commonly called, is an inflammation within the mastoid bone. This bone is the prominence felt behind the ear. It contains the mastoid "antrum" or air space, which connects with the middle ear. No doubt you know that the middle ear communicates with the nose through the "eustachian tube".

Germs of the common cold, cough or tonsilitis travel from the nose or throat through the eustachian tube to the ear. There they set up an inflammation which may extend into the mastoid.

Mastoiditis frequently occurs after a severe cold or infection of the nose or throat. It is especially common after an attack of influenza or pneumonia.

Symptoms of Mastoiditis

As a rule, the sufferer first complains of a severe ear ache. The pain is relieved when a discharge appears from the affected ear. Unless drainage is sufficient, the pain returns. There may be marked swelling behind the ear.

When the disease occurs in adults, it is easy to determine the source of trouble. An adult can accurately locate and describe the pain. But when the victim is young he is frightened and inaccurately describes the pain.

The young sufferer is restless, irritable and runs a high fever. The picture is confusing and unless X-ray pictures are taken the diagnosis may be confused with some other ailment. The X-ray helps to show whether the mastoid really is involved.

Relief and cure sometimes occur without operation. But in no instance, should home remedies be resorted to and no treatment should be given unless under the supervision of a physician. If he decides an operation is necessary, do not delay.

Secretary of War Dern — Atty. Gen. Cummings — Asst. Sec. Woodring — Lt. Col. Cook — Edward Hayes

While Washington is still gasping from the effects of revelations brought to light by the Senate probe of ocean and air mail contracts, another sensation is on the way as Secretary of War Dern, with the approval of President Roosevelt, pushes the probe into army contracts. Startling disclosures are hinted at by Attorney General Homer Cummings, and, say those in the know, indictment of at least two national figures is expected. One of the first witnesses was Assistant Secretary of War Harry Woodring, who was followed by Lieutenant Colonel H. Weir Cook, war flier, member of Indiana National Guard and official of the American Legion. In Washington also is Edward Hayes, National Commander of the Legion, who is believed to be personally investigating rumored allegation that Legion officials offered to influence War Department purchases for retainers as high as $50,000.

MOVIES

AT THE GRAND

Tonight will be your last chance to see Carole Lombard in her current starring production, "Brief Moment," at the Grand Theatre.

The picture is Columbia's screen adaptation of the successful Broadway production which ran at the Belasco Theatre.

Gene Raymond, Monroe Owsley, Florence Britton and Arthur Hohl are the principals in the supporting cast.

AT THE CLIFTONA

Jackie Cooper, the famous boy star, has added a new ambition to his list as a result of his latest starring Paramount picture, "Lone Cowboy," which comes to the Cliftona Theatre on Friday and Saturday. He's going to be a cattle baron, own a ranch, ride horses, rope cattle and otherwise conduct himself like his cowboy friends.

Jackie has no present intention of deserting the screen. He intends to act until he has to go to college. While getting his education he plans to become quarterback of the football team. When he gets through college, he may do some more acting, but is more inclined to become a director "a small one like Uncle Norm," the latter being Norman Taurog.

Coming to The Cliftona Theatre

Lila Lee and Jackie Cooper in a scene from "Lone Cowboy" coming to the Cliftona Theatre, Friday and Saturday.

Secretary of War Dern — Asst. Sec. Woodring — Lt. Col. Cook — Atty. Gen. Cummings — Edward Hayes

While Washington is still gasping from the effects of revelations brought to light by the Senate probe of ocean and air mail contracts, another sensation is on the way as Secretary of War Dern, with the approval of President Roosevelt, pushes the probe into army contracts. Startling disclosures are hinted at by Attorney General Homer Cummings, and, say those in the know, indictment of at least two national figures is expected. One of the first witnesses was Assistant Secretary of War Harry Woodring, who was followed by Lieutenant Colonel H. Weir Cook, war flier, member of Indiana National Guard and official of the American Legion. In Washington also is Edward Hayes, National Commander of the Legion, who is believed to be personally investigating rumored allegation that Legion officials offered to influence War Department purchases for retainers as high as $50,000.

Record Book Output

LONDON—With the exception of 1930, British output of books in 1933 was the highest on record, according to a report from the American consulate-general at London. The total number of books published in that period was 15,022, an increase of 188 over the preceding year. Publication of novels during 1933 reached the record figure of 1,950 volumes. The year's output of fiction, however, registered a decrease.

MOVIES

AT THE GRAND

Tonight will be your last chance to see Carole Lombard in her current starring production, "Brief Moment," at the Grand Theatre.

The picture is Columbia's screen adaptation of the successful Broadway production which ran at the Belasco Theatre.

Gene Raymond, Monroe Owsley, Florence Britton and Arthur Hohl are the principals in the supporting cast.

AT THE CLIFTONA

Jackie Cooper, the famous boy star, has added a new ambition to his list as a result of his latest starring Paramount picture, "Lone Cowboy," which comes to the Cliftona Theatre on Friday and Saturday. He's going to be a cattle baron, own a ranch, ride horses, rope cattle and otherwise conduct himself like his cowboy friends.

Jackie has no present intention of deserting the screen. He wants to act until he has to go to college. While getting his education he plans to become quarterback of the football team. When he gets through college, he may do some more acting, but is more inclined to become a director "a swell one like Uncle Norm," the latter being Norman Taurog.

Coming to The Cliftona Theatre

Will Rogers Picks A Story For This Spot

By WILL ROGERS

WOMEN still get seats in street cars in small towns, where folks are neighborly, or where she'll be likely to see you at church the next Sunday, but in New York and a lot of other big towns they get to stand up unless they can whip some big man.

Well, I reckon it was on one of them slow-motion green street cars on Broadway that this happened. A young man got up and said to a young woman that had been standing beside his seat, "Here's a seat, lady."

She wasn't used to it. She says, "No, thanks; please keep your seat."

He says, "No, you take it. I don't want it any more."

"No, I insist. You must set down," she says.

So he did, but he got awful red and looked terribly uneasy. Finally, after about ten blocks, she says, "Well, if you're awful uncomfortable in that seat, I will set in it, just to please you."

"Thanks," he says. "And I'll jump right off here. I got to walk back ten blocks now to where I wanted to get off in the first place."

A Tribute to Marksmanship

By IRVIN S. COBB

THERE was a tailor who lived in a town where I spent part of my youth, who was probably the skinniest tailor south of Mason and Dixon's Line. Indeed, I am inclined to believe that among tailors he held the skinny championship of the entire United States. In profile

he suggested a pair of callipers. There wasn't a spare ounce on him.

On an autumnal evening he was one of several who went coon-hunting in the woods. As the party was returning and had reached the edge of the town one youth hauled out of his pocket a newly purchased revolver which he thought was unloaded. He snapped it and it behaved as unloaded revolvers usually do under such circumstances. The bullet entered the thigh of the attenuated tailor.

While several of the group sought to make the wounded man comfortable at the roadside, two others hurried off for medical assistance. The nearest physician was an elderly person of full habits and a gruff fashion of speech who lived in the outskirts, perhaps a quarter of a mile from the spot where the accident had occurred. He had retired two hours earlier, after a session with a bottle of prime Bourbon, and was now sound asleep.

Badly excited and very much out of breath, the two coon-hunters reached his residence. After repeated knocking at the front door they heard the sound of an upper window being raised and a somewhat thickened voice demanding to know what they wanted at that hour of the night.

"Come on down right away, please, Doc," called back one of the pair. "You're needed."

"Waz mazzer?" he answered.

"Wade Hoyt's been shot down the road here a little piece."

"Wade Hoyt, huh? Who shot 'im?"

"Bill Wilgus."

"Where'd he shoot 'im?"

"In the upper part of the leg."

"Damn good shootin'," said the old doctor as he closed the window and went back to bed.

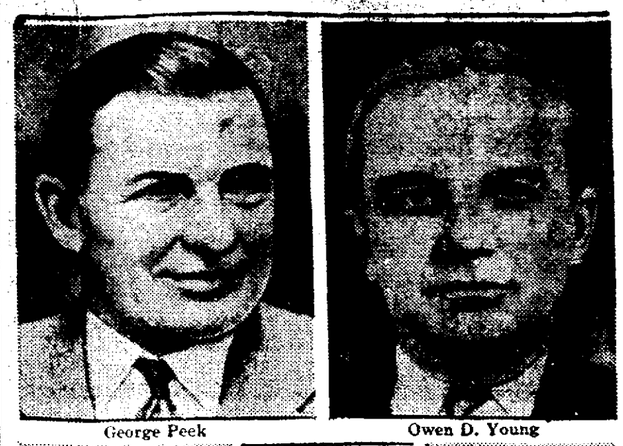
Whose Fault?

When a Child Won't Study

"Kept after school!" And it isn't the child's fault, or the teacher's. His mother is to blame. How can a boy get his lessons when his senses are dulled day after day by dosing with sickening purgatives? When a child's bowels are stagnant they need help, of course. But not some drastic drug to upset the stomach, perhaps weaken the entire system; or form the laxative habit. On the right, parents will find a happy solution of this problem: Here's a boy who gets good marks, has time and energy for play. He is never ill, hardly ever has so much as a cold. When he does show any symptoms of being sluggish, his mother knows just what to do. She gives him a little California Syrup of Figs—and that is all. It's a natural, fruity laxative that is agreeable to take, and its gentle laxative action comes from senna. Parents are urged to use just pure California Syrup of Figs. Be sure bottle says 'California'.

Aiding on U. S. Trading Plan



George Peek — Owen D. Young

David Sarnoff — Secretary Hull

A plan closely resembling the soviet system of government barter is being evolved by President Roosevelt and is expected to be made public coincident with the President's tariff message to Congress. The plan, based on suggestions by George N. Peek, former A. A. A. mogul, Secretary of State Cordell Hull, Owen D. Young, of General Electric, David Sarnoff, of Radio Corporation of America, and others, would function in the same way as the Amtorg Company functions for Russia. One feature of Peek's suggestion would virtually make every U. S. Consulate abroad a trading station for selling American goods and buying foreign products.

SCIOTO-TWP SCHOOL ROBBERY LOSS HUGE

A large amount of property was stolen from the Scioto-twp school, Commercial Point, early this week, according to the report of Deputy Sheriff Miller Fissell who investigated.

The school was preparing to stage a play and a number of the properties, some of which had been borrowed, were stolen. Missing articles are a 9x12 rug valued at $60; a radio, violin and case, desk clock, alarm clocks, five boxes of candy, saxaphone, and fountain pen.

It is believed the same persons who broke into the Muhlenberg-twp school at Darbyville a week ago perpetrated this burglary.

MRS. GOFF ENTERTAINS BRIDGE CLUB MEMBERS

Mrs. Frank Goff, N. Court-st, entertained her bridge club members and one guest, Mrs. C. E. Bowers at a pleasant evening of cards Wednesday at her home.

Two tables of bridge were in play with high score trophies going to Mrs. Goff and Mrs. N. E. Reichelderfer. Dainty refreshments were served after the game.

Mrs. Melvin S. Rinehart, S. Scioto-st, will be hostess to the club in two weeks.

INSULL TO REMAIN; HEALTH IS REASON

ATHENS, Feb. 15.—Premier Tsaldaris has decided to permit Samuel Insull, indicted Chicago utilities magnate, to remain in Greece indefinitely because of his ill health, it was reliably reported today.

Insull's residence permit expired Jan. 31 and the government had planned to deport him after the United States government twice unsuccessfully attempted his extradition.

In order to justify Tsaldaris' decision the report of physicians who examined Insull will be submitted to the American legation.

Will Rogers Picks A Story For This Spot

WOMEN still get seats in street cars in small towns, where folks are neighborly, or where she'll be likely to see you at church the next Sunday, but in New York and a lot of other big towns they get to stand up unless they can whip some big man.

Well, I reckon it was on one of them slow-motion green street cars on Broadway that this happened. A young man got up and said to a young woman that had been standing beside his seat, "Here's a seat, lady."

She wasn't used to it. She says, "No, thanks; please keep your seat."

He says, "No, you take it. I don't want it any more."

"No, I insist. You must set down," she says.

So he did, but he got awful red and looked terribly uneasy. Finally, after about ten blocks, she says, "Well, if you're awful uncomfortable in that seat, I wi'l set in it, just to please you."

"Thanks," he says. "And I'll jump right off here. I got to walk back ten blocks now to where I wanted to get off in the first place."

A Tribute to Marksmanship

By IRVIN S. COBB

THERE was a tailor who lived in a town where I spent part of my youth, who was probably the skinniest tailor south of Mason and Dixon's Line. Indeed, I am inclined to believe that among tailors he held the skinny championship of the entire United States. In profile

he suggested a pair of callipers. There wasn't a spare ounce on him.

On an autumnal evening he was one of several who went coon-hunting in the woods. As the party was returning and had reached the edge of the town one youth hauled out of his pocket a newly purchased revolver which he thought was unloaded. He snapped it and it behaved as unloaded revolvers usually do under such circumstances. The bullet entered the thigh of the attenuated tailor.

While several of the group sought to make the wounded man comfortable at the roadside, two others hurried off for medical assistance. The nearest physician was an elderly person of full habits and a gruff fashion of speech who lived in the outskirts, perhaps a quarter of a mile from the spot where the accident had occurred. He had retired two hours earlier, after a session with a bottle of prime Bourbon, and was now sound asleep.

Badly excited and very much out of breath, the two coon-hunters reached his residence. After repeated knocking at the front door they heard the sound of an upper window being raised and a somewhat thickened voice demanding to know what they wanted at that hour of the night.

"Come on down right away, please, Doc," called back one of the pair. "You're needed."

"Waz mazzer?" he answered.

"Wade Hoyt's been shot down the road here a little piece."

"Wade Hoyt, huh? Who shot 'im?"

"Bill Wilgus."

"Where'd he shoot 'im?"

"In the upper part of the leg."

"Damn good shootin'," said the old doctor as he closed the window and went back to bed.

Whose Fault?

When a Child Won't Study

"Kept after school!" And it isn't the child's fault, or the teacher's. His mother is to blame. How can a boy get his lessons when his senses are dulled day after day by dosing with sickening purgatives? When a child's bowels are stagnant they need help, of course. But not some drastic drug to upset the stomach, perhaps weaken the entire system; or form the laxative habit. On the right, parents will find a happy solution of this problem: Here's a boy who gets good marks, has time and energy for play. He is never ill, hardly ever has so much as a cold. When he does show any symptoms of being sluggish, his mother knows just what to do. She gives him a little California Syrup of Figs—and that is all. It's a natural, fruity laxative that is agreeable to take, and its gentle laxative action comes from senna. Parents are urged to use just pure California Syrup of Figs. Be sure bottle says 'California'.

Aiding on U. S. Trading Plan

George Peek — Owen D. Young — David Sarnoff — Secretary Hull

A plan closely resembling the soviet system of government barter is being evolved by President Roosevelt and is expected to be made public coincident with the President's tariff message to Congress. The plan, based on suggestions by George N. Peek, former A. A. A. mogul, Secretary of State Cordell Hull, Owen D. Young, of General Electric, David Sarnoff, of Radio Corporation of America, and others, would function in the same way as the Amtorg Company functions for Russia. One feature of Peek's suggestion would virtually make every U. S. Consulate abroad a trading station for selling American goods and buying foreign products.

SCIOTO-TWP SCHOOL ROBBERY LOSS HUGE

A large amount of property was stolen from the Scioto-twp school, Commercial Point, early this week, according to the report of Deputy Sheriff Miller Fissell who investigated.

The school was preparing to stage a play and a number of the properties, some of which had been borrowed, were stolen. Missing articles are a 9x12 rug valued at $60; a radio, violin and case, desk clock, alarm clocks, five boxes of candy, saxaphone, and fountain pen.

It is believed the same persons who broke into the Muhlenberg-twp school at Darbyville a week ago perpetrated this burglary.
